Ehrlichman claims proof Dean lied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman says he has evidence to "trip up" the sworn testimony of John Dean III.

Ehrlichman said he believes Dean is trying to implicate President Nixon to save himself from criminal prosecution.

"The only person who would have been in a position to keep abreast of an investigation and to have taken steps to protect the three or four people, including himself, who were involved in the inception of this thing, was Dean," Ehrlichman said.

The former presidential counsel "was uniquely at the pivot point of the cover-up," said Ehrlichman in the strongest counterattack to date against Dean.

Ehrlichman's statements came in an interview with the Christian Science Monitor as Dean concluded Friday five days of exhaustive testimony and stood firm on his charge that President Nixon knew the outlines of the cover-up as early as last Sept. 15.

Dean said Ehrlichman and former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman shared that knowledge with the President.

Ehrlichman said in a CBS television interview he first became aware a cover-up was in progress last March after he had begun an investigation at the request of the President.

"Dean will be tripped up by the logs I kept of all meetings," the Christian Science Monitor quoted Ehrlichman as saying.

In the television interview Ehrlichman acknowledged he had responsibility for the White House team investigating leaks of national security information. But he claimed he had no advance knowledge that the team planned the 1971 burglary of the office of the psychiatrist of Pentagon papers figure Daniel Ellsberg.

Ehrlichman appeared on CBS program "60 Minutes" and was interviewed by correspondent Mike Wallace in a session taped Thursday.

Dean admitted to Senate questioners that he was heavily involved in the coverup. But he said he was acting on the orders of Haldeman and Ehrlichman. In his testimony Dean also disclosed that the White House maintained a list of the President's political enemies and that pressure was put on him to come up with a plan to harrass them through tax audits, investigations and other steps.

Dean said Ehrlichman knew of the enemies list. Ehrlichman said, "That's something that was developed totally outside of my sight and hearing."

Senate testimony established that FBI logs of wiretaps on government employes and newsmen ended up in Ehrlichman's White House safe but he said he never authorized or ordered the wiretapping of newsmen's telephones.

Dean testified repeatedly that he had never been told to investigate the possible involvement of White House aides in the Watergate break-in and had never done so.

Ehrlichman said in the Christian Science Monitor interview that Dean told Nixon, Haldeman and himself that "a very vigorous and intensive investigation had not produced any evidence to implicate anyone except the seven men indicted in the break-in.

In other developments, former Attorney General John Mitchell's attorney said his client definitely has no information implicating the President in the cover-up.

Dean's claim that President Nixon knew of the coverup caused Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., ranking Republican on the Senate committee, to urge the President to find some way to submit a response under oath.

Baker acknowledged any such steps might involve a clash with the doctrine of the separation of powers. A White House spokesman indicated such a move was unlikely.

Special prosecutor Archibald Cox made it known that he has received differing opinions from his staff on whether Nixon or any president could be subpoenaed before a grand jury to testify or indicted and tried.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., a member of the Watergate committee, ordered former White House aide Charles W. Colson to leave his office after Colson admitted he wrote a memo suggesting a tax audit on the returns of Harold J. Gibbons, until recently a vice president of the Teamsters Union in St. Louis, Mo.

The memo described Gibbons as ardently anti-Nixon and "an all out enemy."

8 hurt in 5 accidents

Five traffic accidents on area roads Friday resulted in eight injuries, the highway patrol reported today.

Ricky Akridge, 16, of Catron was injured at 10:30 p.m. on Route D in Lilbourn when he lost control of his car on a curve, ran off the road and struck a telephone pole.

Akridge received a nose cut and a passenger, Judy Lawson, 16, also of Catron, suffered body cuts. Akridge was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital and Miss Lawson was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

Lawrence Morgan, 55, of Cairo, Ill., was injured at 6:35 p.m. at the junction of Highways 61 and 164 at Steele when a car driven west by B. Moore, 69, of Steele pulled into the intersection and struck the Morgan car in the side.

Morgan was taken to Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti.

At 10:35 a.m. on Route Y two miles south of Caruthersville, the driver of a tractor was injured when the tractor was struck from behind by a pickup truck driven by Samuel Mills, 90, of Hornersville.

The tractor driver, Michael Leathers, 18, of Rives, received cuts on the forearm and was taken to a clinic in Hornersville.

Carol Sue Seiler, 13, of Oak Ridge was injured at 4:45 p.m. on Route E one and one-half miles west of Oak Ridge when her bicycle was struck.

The accident occurred when a pickup driven by Arthur Smith, 31, of Friedheim, came over a hill upon six bicycle riders. Smith swerved his truck to the right to avoid the riders and struck the Sieler bicycle as it left the road.

Miss Seiler received head injuries and was taken to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Three persons were injured at 1:50 p.m. in a head-on collision two miles east of Wyatt on Highway60 when a car driven by Joseph Case, 58, of Cecilia, Ky., came upon a car stopped in the road. Case swerved into the left lane and collided with a car driven by Rosie Harris, 52, of Chicago, Ill.

Injured were Helen Johnson, 68, and Julia Love, 70, of Chicago, who suffered leg injuries, and Terry Morrison, 23, of Chicago, who received a back injury. All three were passengers in the Harris vehicle. They were taken to St. Mary's Hospital in Cairo, Ill.

Rice gets 5 years

JACKSON— Charles Rice, 31, of Wyatt, was found guilty Friday of firing a gun at Sikeston police officer Jesse Redd on July 27, 1972 at 329 Luther Street.

Cape Girardeau County Circuit Court Judge Stan Grimm assessed punishment at five years in the state penitentiary. The jury deliberated 40 minutes before reaching the verdict.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Jim Moore had previously filed a motion, approved by the court, which tried Rice under the second offender act. The motion took the question of fixing punishment away from the jury and placed it in the hands of the judge.

Moore said the motion was filed because Rice had a previous felony conviction and because juries tend to be lenient in fixing punishment. Judge Grimm gave Rice the maximum punishment allowed.

Scott County Magistrate Court Judge Lloyd Briggs was disqualified by Rice at the preliminary level and Judge Jerry Estes of Cape Girardeau was also disqualified. Rice tried to disqualify Judge Koss Blomeyer of Stoddard County, but he had used up his alloted disqualifications. Rice asked that all three judges take mental exams, but was refused.

He was bound over to Scott County Circuit Court following his preliminary hearing on March 26, of this year.

On April 12 his request that Judge Marshall Craig undergo mental examination was not allowed to be filed and his motion to dismiss his court appointed attorney was overruled.

His motion to dismiss Judge Craig and change his venue was upheld and his case was moved to Cape Girardeau County for trial.

Johnson faces theft charges

CHARLESTON — Charges of burglary and stealing were filed Friday afternoon against Paul Johnson, 27, and Rufus "Pop" Armstrong, 34, of Charleston, according to Deputy Sheriff Mike Baughman.

The two men are accused of breaking into a house at 306 Brooklyn St. in Charleston, owned by Shiloh Baptist Church, Wednesday and stealing a 60,000 BTU gas heater, couch and chair.

Bond has been set at $2,500 each and the pair is scheduled to appear before Magistrate T. J. Brown Thursday.

Greer jailed on weapon charge

CHARLESTON — James Napolean Greer, 24, of Wyatt, arrested Friday night by Wyatt Marshal John Pearson, is being held in Mississippi County jail on a charge of exhibiting and flourishing a dangerous and deadly weapon.

Deputy Sheriff Mike Baughman said today Greer reportedly went to the home of Mary Sloan at the corner of Gum and Second streets in Wyatt sometime Friday night inquiring about a girl. When Mrs. Sloan did not tell him where the girl was, he alledgedly went to his car, returned with a shotgun and threatened her.

Bond for Greer, who is scheduled to appear in Magistrate Court Thursday, has been set at $1,000.

Speakman to join police

Edward Speakman of St. Louis, a former Sikeston resident, will join the Sikeston Police Department as a patrolman on July 23, City Manager Jim Huff announced today.

Speakman has been working for the St. Louis County Police Department for three years and has 600 hours of study in the St. Louis police academy.

He is married and a graduate of Sikeston high school

Robbery suspect jailed

POPLAR BLUFF — Leonard Charles Hill of Malden is being held in Butler County Jail for investigation of an armed robbery about noon Friday at E. C. Robinson Lumber Co.

Hill was apprehended Friday night in Malden by the city police, highway patrol and Dunklin County sheriff's department.

According to the patrol, the robbery was committed by two black men, who held up Charlie Dees an employe of the lumber company, taking $200 and three guns.

The other man being sought is about 25 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs about 180 pounds.

Agencies seeking summer help

By JEANNE MAYNARD

It's summertime and the living is easy, but if you are young, able- bodied and excited about living, you're probably not content with simply lying around the house getting soft just because you haven't been able to find a paying summer job between school terms.

But wait. All is not lost. If you've got the time, we've got the place. Your summer can be filled with fun and excitement. All you have to do is apply that resource you find so heavy on your hands— time— to one of the many volunteer agencies around town in need of your services.

So, what's in it for you? Plenty. The self-satisfying feeling you get only by knowing that you are needed; the lump you get in your throat when you discover that people actually listen to your worthwhile ideas, and at the end of it all, the surprising realization that you have grown without the help of vitamins or hormones... in character.

For the future nurses in the crowd, or anybody else who has an eye on a career in the medical profession, don't overlook the opportunity to get a sneak preview of things to come by volunteering your good cheer as a Candy Striper at Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

While caring for the sick, you will be gaining practical experience and learning more about the many job opportunities available in the life- saving business. For more details, contact Mrs. David Croom at 667- 5918.

Along the same line, for young people interested in specialized work, the Sikeston Regional Diagnostic Clinic is interested in volunteer assistance on an individual basis with craft projects, recreation, taking children on short walks, and even letter writing. Sports- minded fellows are badly needed to help organize weekend ball games.

If you can be available between 7 and 9 p.m. during the week and anytime on the weekend, contact Judith Lopp, director of nursing at the clinic by phone at 471- 9455.

If handicrafts are "your thing", the Easter Seal Home Craft Shop is the place to be. Dolls, glasswork, stuffed animals, woodworking projects purses and similar crafts must be assembled into kits for the handicapped to construct. A world of materials are available for you to mix and match. Express yourself. Phone 472- 0663 for more details.

Experience is a valuable asset for college students planning a professional teaching career and it isn't always easy to find. Right? Stop the search, and hurry on over to the Sikeston Public School System, which is conducting a summer session; and you can help. The academic- minded may act as a teacher's aide in theclassroom. Recreation assistants are needed on the playground, and help is needed in the cafeteria. You might even get a free cookie. To establish the hours, you can come between 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Contact Miss Hariet Jones at 471-3248.

If you can devote just six hours, in one-hour sessions to teach eager 4- H'ers a skill, Mrs. Peter Myers, 4- H club leader, would like to talk to you. Club members would like to know more about photography, electricity, clothing construction, gardening, flower growing and arranging, food and nutrition, automotive construction, small engine construction, consumer education and public speaking. Interested? Call 471-3248.

Volunteerism has long been the basis for the Girl Scout organization, and you'll never be too old to help. The Sikeston Cadettes could use some transportation to Branson Aug. 14- 17 where they will visit Silver Dollar City. Assistant leaders and recreation volunteers are also needed. If you can devote any time or energy, call 471- 1035 or write Cotton Boll Council, P.O. Box 336, Sikeston.

There's a world out there which needs you. Share a little of yourself, and watch those idle moments turn into a summer full of rewarding smiles.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Don't cuss the weather. Nine-tenths of the people couldn't start a conversation if it didn't change once in a while.

We think the rain is caused by the jets, we also think that one of the reasons why our money in foreign countries is not worth anything since they have plenty of paper of their own, and since we don't have any silver backing us or any gold backing our money. No wonder that the other countries are buying gold. We wonder if Russia pays us in dollars or in gold. If they can buy the dollars so damn much cheaper than they can buy gold, I expect them to pay for the wheat, but some of the boys at the coffee shop tell me that Russia is buying it on credit, that we are not getting any money for the wheat. I don't know, I have never seen any place in the paper where it says Russia is buying on credit, neither have I seen any place in the paper where they said Russia was paying us in dollars or paying us in gold. While we don't own any wheat, we do feel sorry for the wheat farmer that have sold their wheat and hope that a new price rise is on the new crop to where they can make a little money.

Speaking of inflation, in more ways than one, they recently raised an ancient covered bridge across the Housantonic river in Connecticut to protect it from rising water levels.

Cost of the project was $556,000, which was probably not bad for the four- month- long job of levering the bridge off its original foundations and inserting two- foot- thick slabs at either end.

The interesting thing is that the bridge is believed to have cost a mere $900 when it was built back in 1802.

'FEDERAL SPENDING CLOCK'

For the first time in history, the rate the government spends money is being clocked, literally, by a "Federal Spending Clock" located in the national headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Every 1.2 seconds a dial indicates the expenditure of another $10,000, the average annual income of an American family. Every 12.6 seconds a light flashes, indicating the spending of another $100,000. And every two minutes and six seconds, a "beep" is heard, signaling that the federal government has just dropped another million smackeroos.

The "beep," incidentally, goes off about 700 times a day. By the end of the current fiscal year, the rapidly changing digital figures on top of the clock will have registered a total of some $250 billion.

Meanwhile, over at the Census Bureau, there's another clock that records the arrival every few seconds of one more citizen who will spend most of his lifetime making the other clock run.

While scanning through Catholic Quote the other day, we were impressed by an item written by Harold Blake Walker. Here it is:

"In my boyhood I was constantly reminded that there were standards of conduct to which I owed obedience.

"Courtesy and consideration for others were required of gentlemen.

"Honesty and good manners were by no means optional.

"Respect for the property of others was mandatory, and if a misdirected baseball punctured a neighbor's window, I paid for the window the hard way.

"What is more, the standards of conduct and manners were generally accepted. There was a consensus concerning right and wrong.

"I have an uneasy feeling that in matters of deportment we have slipped.

"Teenage riots, disrespect for teachers in the public schools, student disorder on college campuses, and violence on our city streets suggest that the standards of conduct once regarded as required have become more or less optional.

"Nevertheless, in a free society, standards of deportment are required, not optional."

I happened to be browsing through one of my favorite books the other night; it was "Six Crises," by Richard M. Nixon, one of my favorite authors.

There's a passage, in it, on page 408 to be exact, in which he is recounting a conversation he had with Jack Kennedy shortly after the 1960 election but before Kennedy had taken office. Mr. Nixon writes of the occasion:

"He asked for my opinion of the career people in CIA, USIA, and the State Department. I told him very candidly the conviction I had reached after my very first trip abroad in 1953, and from which I had not deviated — that our careerists in these agencies are for the most part devoted, loyal, and efficient public servants.

"But many times they lack imagination, or are fearful of using it. All too often they are more concerned with keeping a good job than with doing one. I made two recommendations.

"As far as CIA was concerned, I felt that its assignment was presently too broad. It should continue to have primary responsibility for gathering and evaluating intelligence, in which it was doing a good job.

"But I said it had been my plan, had I been elected, to set up a new and independent organization for carrying out covert para-military operations."

That's what the man said. Maybe he should have called the book: "Mein Kampf."

Some tribesmen in New Guinea have offered to become cannibals again in order to put on a show at a local festival. They figured it would be a good gate attraction.

The government declined the offer.

It wasn't such an unusual idea, though. We do the same thing over here — only we call it the Watergate Hearings.

And speaking of that, the Wall Street Journal carried a story the other day on the demoralization that has overtaken the Justice Department in the wake of the Watergate disclosures.

Everybody wants to quit and feels as though he's been had, particularly by John Mitchell. One recently resigned official said:

"John Mitchell brought the morals of Wall Street to government."

That's a pretty stern indictment.

The things we bicyclists have to put up with, you wouldn't believe it.

The other day in Washington, D. C., they were holding a hearing on an alleged hit- and run of a bicyclist by a motorist.

During the course of the hearing the assistant corporation counsel for the district, a young man named Jeff Cooper, said:

"Unfortunately, bicycles are entitled to a lane in traffic. Every morning as I drive to work I feel like mowing them down like bowling pins. I don't understand why people ride bicycles when they could enjoy air conditioning and music in their cars."

He actually said that. We called him up and he admitted it.

Over the past year - and-a-half, riding my bicycle on the streets of Washington, I find a strange feeling coming over me.

It's called insanity.

The other day I found myself out in the middle of a busy street, nose- to -nose with a motorist whom I was on the verge of bashing in the mouth.

The week before I came within a hair of jumping into the front seat of an open convertible and thrashing the driver.

Last month I actually chased a Volkswagen a mile before I despaired of catching him so that I could throttle its master.

Why do I do these things? Why am I going crazy? Because they keep trying to kill me. They think I'm a bowling pin and they keep trying to mow me down.

Call me paranoid, if you will, but in the words of the poet Delmore Schwarts — "Even paranoids have enemies."

Let me ask you this, however. If it is so comfortable in those air conditioned cars with the Muzak flowing, why not sit back and relax and enjoy it? Why be in such a hurry to kill a bicyclist?

We may have to go to guerilla warfare, you know. So, watch it.

CRACKDOWN ON PORN

The extent to which the Burger Court has moved away from the permissiveness of the Warren Court is evidenced most clearly in the Supreme Court's 5 to 4 decision restricting hard core pornography.

In ruling that community standards rather than national standards may be used in determining whether material is obscene, the court has given state prosecutors a powerful new weapon to control printed and filmed filth. There's no question of the meaning of the court's decision, for Chief Justice Burger, in writing the majority opinion, noted that the court "agreed on concrete guidelines to isolate 'hard core' pornography from expression protected by the First Amendment."

The Supreme Court's decision is, therefore, a great victory for decency and for respect for the human personality.

It is interesting that only a few weeks ago there was published in this county a tremendously important and useful book entitled "The Case Against Pornography" (The Library Press, Box 509, La Salle, Ill. $8.95), edited by David Holbrook, a British educator.

In his introduction to this collection of essays on pornography, Mr. Holbrook observes that "our failure to discriminate against pornography marks a deep failure in our intellectual life." He pointed out that pornography is a "hideous debasement of the human image." Mr. Holbrook relates the acceptance of pornography to the nihilism revealed in the Nazi movement a generation ago, saying that "the same fanatical nihilism is abroad in the avant - garde and underground pornography, while the phenomenon of the 'sexual revolution' belongs to the same naturalism which led to Treblinka and Auschwitz. How did pornography become part of 'protest' and 'progressive politics'?"

Prof. Ernest van den Haag of New York University is author of one of the most illuminating essays in the book. He makes clear how actions are influenced by ideas and ideal models and relates pornography to gruesome crimes. In one passage, Dr. van den Haag, who specializes in psychiatric studies, says: "I believe that pornography nearly always leads to sadistic pornography. By definition, pornography deindividualizes and dehumanizes sexual acts; by eliminating all the contests it reduces people simply to bearers of impersonal sensations of pleasure and pain. The dehumanization eliminates the empathy that restrains us ultimately from sadism and non-consensual acts."

Dr. van den Haag doesn't hesitate to draw the local conclusion from his studies, asserting: "If we indulge pornography, and do not allow censorship to restrict it, our society at best will become ever more coarse, brutal, anxious, indifferent, deindividualized, hedonistic, at worst, its ethos will disintegrate altogether."

Dr. Irving Kristol, editor of The Public Interest, gives a similar analysis and reaches the same conclusions. He notes that "the way we use our minds and imaginations shape our characters and help define us as persons." He notes that, historically, society has restricted cruel and debasing spectacles. What is at stake in the issue of pornography, Dr. Kristol declares "is civilization and humanity, nothing less. The idea that 'everything is permitted' rests on the premise of nihilism and nihilistic implications." Dr. Kristol, like Prof. van den Haag, follows his ideas to their logical conclusion. "Lest there be any misunderstanding as to what I am saying, "I'll put it as bluntly as possible: if you care for the quality of life in our American democracy, then you have to be for censorship."

The majority of the U. S. Supreme Court apparently followed much of the same line of reasoning and displayed the same concern for civilized values and the dignity of the human being. Only people indifferent to the quality of human life can be dismayed at the Supreme Court's ruling against the dehumanizing influence of hard core pornography.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

Brazil's Reign of Torture

WASHINGTON— The fourth in a line of military dictators, Gen. Ernesto Geisel, has just been anointed as Brazil's next president. He helped plot the 1964 military coup, which ousted the corrupt, left- leaning government of President Joao Goulart.

The military leaders have achieved an impressive economic growth and financial stability. But the price has been repression and torture. As one of Brazil's sternest judges and a member of the National Security Council, Geisel has condoned the torture tactics that have been used to keep the military regime in power.

In the august chambers of government, he is removed from the cries of the victims. But the cries have been heard by priests who have collected the grisly details. The methods of torture and the names of the torturers have been whispered to ecclesiastics. At great personal risk, couriers have smuggled the information to us.

'Parrot's Perch'

The documentation furnished us describes how the victim's wrists are lashed to his ankles, then he is hung upside down from a pipe passed under his knees. This is called the "Parrot's Perch."

In this helpless position, he is tortured with a magneto machine, sometimes called a "Little Piano," which is used to send high- voltage shocks into the victim's genital organs, nipples, eyes, ear lobes and lips.

As a variation, the upside down victim is gagged and tubes are thrust into his nostrils. Water is slowly dripped into the tubes causing convulsions. This is called the "drowning torture."

The documents also charge that "broom handles are inserted in the anus or the vagina of those being tortured." Lighted cigarettes and cigars are also applied to the most sensitive parts of the body. "This process is jocularly called 'turning the folks into ashtrays,' " report the priests.

The Tortured

We have space to mention only a few of the victims whose cases have been documented by the priests. A journalist named Carlos Nigolau Danielli, for example, was arrested in Sao Paulo last December and "intensely tortured," swear the priests. "In his cell, he wrote on the walls with his own blood, 'This blood will be avenged!' "

A woman psychology student, Aurora Maria Nascimento Furtado, was arrested last November in Guanabara, hung upside down and tortured with electrodes, then beaten to death.

"When her family and her lawyer went to claim the body, they saw a deep wound two centimeters long on her forehead," report the priests. This was evidence, they say, that "Aurora had been tortured by 'The Tourniquet,' " a piece of metal driven into the flesh by tightening a cloth or leather band.

Another student, Frederico Eduardo Mayr, was arrested in February 1972 and strapped to a galvanized metal chair. High-voltage electricity was run through his body, declare the priests, until he died. Although "covered with blood and with many hematomas," he was able to whisper the names of his torturers to a fellow prisoner.

Couldn't Move

The priests also describe the tortures of Jose Julio de Araujo who was so abused he was "incapable of any significant movement" when the police finally murdered him in August 1972.

All told, the priests cite 28 torture deaths, plus 15 others whose deaths are suspected of being caused by torture.

The names whispered by the victims, in many cases, have been identified as Army officers. To list a few, there are Captains Homero Cesar Machado, Dalmo Luiz Cirillo, Mauricio Lopes Lima, Benoni de Arruda Albernaz, Inocencio Fabricio de Matos Beltrao and Major Carlos Alberto Brilhante Ulstra.

Albernaz, for example, allegedly thrust an electric wire into a tortured priest's mouth, "telling him that it was the Host of the Sacrament."

In many cases, the dying men were able to gasp to other prisoners only the partial names or nicknames of their torturers: an Army captain called "Attila," and "Investigator Dirceu who calls himself 'Jesus Christ'" and such other colorful characters as "Dr. Ney" and "Pretty Joe."

U.S. Stays Silent

The Nixon Administration, which has plenty to say about the torture of American prisoners in North Vietnam, has kept silent about the outrages in friendly Brazil. Indeed, the United States will help subsidize the torturers by sending $58 million in military aid. A new U.S. ambassador, John Crimmins, is also preparing to leave for Brazil.

We have been assured, however, that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will question Crimmins on what he thinks about torture in Brazil and what he can do to discourage it.

Footnote: The Brazilian embassy has refused to return our calls for comment. Nevertheless, we are prepared to send reporters to Brazil, if the regime will grant them complete freedom of access, to verify the details furnished by the priests.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Law and Order Wins:

Old Line Democrat- Labor Alliance Revives;

Smashes Key New Politics Coalition Machine

NEW YORK— Standard equipment for any night spot comedian is a gag which runs: "A burly chap walks up to a tourist and asks the stranger if he knows where Central Park is. The visitor says no. The husky inquisitor says, "Good, then I'll mug you here.' "

Laughter. Bitter laughter. Uncomfortable patrons worry about getting home that evening.

This is a city under siege. There are few safe havens. Just lucky ones.

Posh Park Avenue and the tragic ghettos are seared with the insensate cruelty of the pusher, the thief, the hundreds of roving street gangs. The marauders are impartial. The police try, but sadism strikes in this teeming megalopolis against black and white, Puerto Rican, Jew and Gentile.

In my favorite Chinese restaurant this past Tuesday, primary election night, a maitre d' who recognized me came to the table. I hadn't seen him for some years. Why? He explained he had saved his money. He opened his own restaurant on the Grand Concourse, once quite seriously called the "Champs Elysees of the Bronx." Near a huge movie house built in the '30s.

Incessantly he was robbed. Constantly street gangs broke through the skylight at night. Continually they smashed the bottles at the bar. Wantonly. For kicks. Not for drinks. My Chinese friend held out nine months. He went broke. Now he is back at his old stand working for someone else.

And, just drive on the intra-city highways. On any clear day you can see autos which had broken down the night before and had to be left for morning. The dawn's light shows them stripped, just shells.

On Democratic mayoralty primary day, the people revolted. They regrouped in the old traditional big city majority. They defeated the "New Politics" Congressman Herman Badillo, who had boasted his constituency consisted of the black and Puerto Rican communities.

He had narrowed himself. He had seemingly abandoned his universality. He had said the Italian community didn't count in a primary. He likened himself to Tom Bradley, recently elected mayor of Los Angeles.

But Badillo for got that Bradley had been a police officer and had not narrowed his claim to the big city minorities.

No man can claim them. Badillo had raised the race issue. That cost him the nomination. He lost to the bantam comptroller Abe Beame, a traditional Rooseveltian Democrat. It was a run- off primary between two men— and Beame cut sharply into Badillo's claimed ownership of minority and ethnic groups.

Blacks and Puerto Ricans, those prominent and the people in the street, worked for Beame, voted for him— and for one reason. They want law and order. They want to walk their city streets again. They want to go out and buy their evening or early morning newspapers. They want to gather again in coffee shops.

Thus, since this mayoralty primary was held in the nation's biggest, most ethnic teeming city, it is of profound significance.

Perhaps this report should have begun with the early telephone calls made to "little Abe" the next morning by Sens. Hubert Humphrey and later Scoop Jackson. They congratulated him.

If Beame takes the city, succeeding Mayor John Lindsay, Beame gives the Democrats a powerful base for his party's big push to drive Gov. Nelson Rockefeller from office next year. If they can accomplish this, they will have the state's huge delegation to the 1976 Democratic presidential nominating convention--- and the '74 mini-convention.

This could reshape powerful forces inside the party. But there are two equally vital issues here. The demand of the people--- all the people, all races, creeds--- for peace on their streets. And there is the reconstruction of the old coalition, the ante-McGovern majority in the almost forgotten Democratic party.

In this fight for Beame were the party machines--- the famed old Bronx operation which virtually made Jack and Bob Kennedy. Tammany Hall under a union official, Frank Rosetti. The Brooklyn club organization led by Meade Esposito.

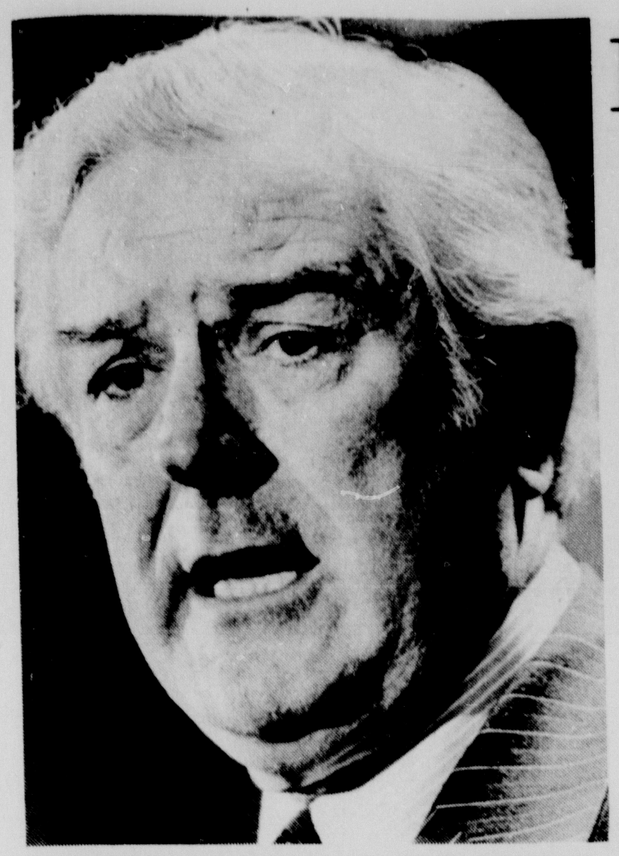
And above all, the labor movement. There were the leaders of the Black Trade Unionists, John Burnell and A. Philip Randolph. And the powerful Maritime Port Council, AFL— CIO--- longshoremen, Jesse Calhoon's marine engineers, et al., coordinated by a longshoreman's official, Tony Mennella.

And the huge United Federation of Teachers, led by Al Shanker, the world's biggest local. They all got out printing. The teachers, weary of muggings, knifings, rapes and robberies, put a million leaflets into the streets for Beame. And three times circularized their 75,000 members, some 17,000 of whom are black and Puerto Rican.

And pushing with passion for Beame was velvet voiced black Manhattan Borough President Percy Sutton, the most potential 1977 mayoralty Democratic candidate.

As political analyst Ben Wattenberg, leader of the middle- of- the- road Coalition for a Democratic Majority, put it to me after the Beame 3 to 2 margin (some 200,000 vote majority was reported): "Beame became the core of traditional Democratic liberalism. He beat the new politics crowd. This is where the Democratic strength must pick up again if the party is to pick up the pieces. This is a triumph of the party's traditional wing. This is the real majority in the party."

So, in the November election, it will be Beame against Republican State Sen. John Marchi, a uniquely honest man. Thus it will be law and order with justice all the way. This is a sign of the times. Remember, this happened in "liberal" old New York.



WHATEVER CONCERNS Texan John Connally here, it shouldn't be his switch from the Democratic to the Republican party—he's talked about as the next GOP presidential nominee.

Lewallen receives top rating for 2nd consecutive year

SILVA— For the second consecutive year Camp Lewallen has received an A-100 rating, the highest possible, from the North Central Executive Committee, National Council of Boy Scouts.

Announcement of the rating was made by Dr. Mark F. Scully, president of the Southeast Missouri Council, Boy Scouts of America, Thursday night at a meeting of the council's board of directors at Camp Lewallen.

This followed a day-long inspection made of the camp by Wayne Elesy of Columbia, member of the North Central Executive Committee; William B. Pinnell, Commander James Dowdy and SeMo Council Executive Jerry Beckner, of Cape Girardeau; Camp Director Fred French and John Sargent, both of Sikeston; Steven Hatcher of Poplar Bluff; and Bradley Dehn of Dexter.

The camp also received an A-100 rating in 1972.

Joe Kiser of Piedmont, camping chairman, said the inspection had three major objectives; to review the council's current Camp Lewallen camping operation; to review the year-round camping program; and to review a written report to the executive board with recommendations for future programs.

The written report included a checklist of 117 points, some of which are mandatory for a camp to exist and others which are optional. Camp Lewallen passed on all 117 points.

Jack Armstrong, Area III Scout Executive, a guest at the meeting, said Camp Lewallen was an outstanding Camp and that this report was in no way common for a Scout camp.

Mel Vogel of Cape Girardeau, council organizational and extension chairman, reported that 970 boys has been set as the council's overall goal to be enrolled during the Fall Roundup as the result of a survey taken of district chairmen.

Ken Myles of Cape Girardeau, Fall Round chairman, announced that Sept. 24 will be "School Night for Cubbing" and Sept. 29 a "Campout for Scouting" will be held in each district as part of a coordinated council effort.

Charles Wiles, director of field services at Southeast Missouri State University and a Shawnee District Committee Chairman, reported that a computer science merit badge clinic for any Scouts in the council will be held Aug. 17-18 at the university. He added that the clinic, coordinated by the school's computer science department, is the first attempt to hold such a merit badge clinic on the council level.

Wiles, reporting for the Shawnee District, also announced the formation of a new Explorer Post in Cape Girardeau. The post, which has been organized in the area of computer science, has 15 scouts already signed up. The advisor is Seth Carmody, an employe in the computer center at Southeast Missouri State University. An organizational meeting will be held in July and anyone interested should contact the Scout office in Cape Girardeau for further details.

Kaiser, council camping chairman, also reported that a Franklin Streuwe Canoe Trail has been established. This experience, according to Kaiser, is for older Scouts and can range from two to five days in length.

Kaiser said that specifications for the new building at the Blue Springs site had been received. He said the Council could now proceed with bids on labor for construction.

Victor Hill of Cape Girardeau, council activities chairman, reported on "Weblos Day" at Camp Lewallen, which is to be held on July 14.

Special recognition in the form of a plaque was given to Lynn Whitworth of Cape Girardeau for his work in getting the swimming pool repaired in time for use at summer camp.

In attendance at the meeting, in addition to the AREA III executive was Arthur Crumb, Area III president. In brief remarks made at the end of the meeting Crumb said: "It is evident by the reports given tonight that the Council program is in excellent shape."

Post 114 elects officers

New officers of the Henry Meldrum Post 114 of the American Legion were elected Thursday night at the Legion Hall on South Kingshighway.

Elected for one-year terms were: Bill Cole, commander; Dub Moore, first vice president; George Johnson, second vice president; Earl Scherer, service officer, Glen Bond, chaplain; Cecil Holman, sergeant-at-arms; Glen McClellan, finance officer; L. I. Flewelling, historian; and George Dawes, judge advocate.

Gideon community fund contributed $100 and New Madrid community fund, $500.

Kansas City begins porno crack down

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A crackdown on pornography has started in Kansas City under a new U.S. Supreme court decision which gives local agencies authority to define obscenity.

Judge Paul E. Vardeman of the Jackson County Circuit Court ruled Friday that 128 books are obscene and ordered them destroyed. He enjoined their further sale.

The books were seized in raids on five book stores by prosecutor Ralph Martin who said anyone selling copies of the 127 books in the future probably will be arrested.

The prosecutor also seized a film. In a petition asking the court to destroy the film, he said it is full of intimate sexual acts, normal and perverted, and has no serious artistic, literary, scientific or political value.

Circuit Judge Timothy D. 'O'Leary is to review the film Monday.

Defender system may shut down

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The president of the Missouri Public Defenders Association says the public defender system will have to shut down operations in six or seven months unless the Missouri legislature comes up with more money.

Association president Howard McFadden of Cole County said the General Assembly appropriated only $949,000 for the operation of the public defender offices presently established in some 14 judicial circuits in the state.

According to McFadden, the amount is about half of what is authorized by enacting legislation. He pointed out that the law requires defendants in all criminal cases must be provided with lawyers and that lawyers cannot be appointed without compensation as they once were.

At a meeting here Friday, the public defenders said the situation could lead to a breakdown in the operation of the criminal process unless necessary funds are forthcoming.

Ozark resolves labor dispute

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The lengthy labor dispute between Ozark Air Lines and the Aircraft Mechanics Fraternal Associaion ended Friday night when union members ratified a new contract and ended a 71day-long strike against the midwest air carrier.

The 560-member mechanics union, voting in St. Louis and Chicago, ratified the contract by an 86 per cent margin, according to Sam Smith, AMFA Local 24 president.

Company officials did not announce immediately how soon flights would be resumed to the 62 cities served by Ozark. Air service to 15 states was halted April 19 when the mechanics walked off the job for higher pay.

"At this time we're being rather vague about the contract's provisions," Smith said from the union's headquarters here. "It contains the removal of the electronic surveilance equipment from work areas. and a more equitable economic package."

Smith said the pay increase was within the 5.5 per cent guideline set down by the federal pay board.

The mechanics had been paid $6.02 per hour under the old contract which expired in April, 1972, and were seeking $6.82 per hour with 15-cent and 30-cent hourly premiums.

A wage settlement had apparently been worked out prior to a May 10 tentative agreement, but was rejected by the union membership because of the television surveilance issue.

The new agreement, which covers a 27-month period, will expire in July, 1974, because it is retroactive to the end of the old contract, Smith said.

An Ozark pilot, Don Burgess, said, "We're happy to be going back to work." Burgess, who is the secretary-treasurer of the local chapter of the Air Line Pilots Association, said he was told by company officials that pilots would be back on the payroll Sunday and that a regular flight schedule would be resumed July 5.

Correction

Miss Amelia Ann Shibley received a doctor of pharmacy degree June 3 from the University of Tennessee Medical Units in Memphis, Tenn. The degree she received was incorrectly listed in an article in Thursday's edition of The Daily Standard. Miss Shibley is the daughter of Mrs. Edward Shibley of 775 Pinnell Lane, New Madrid.

8 treated

Eight accident patients were treated Friday in the emergency room of Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Judy Lawson, 16, Catron, cut right lower leg in car accident; Edward D. Morgan, 49, Charleston, sprained back at work; James D. Brewer, 9, Sikeston, fractured ribs in fall; Henry A. Dale, 45, Lilbourn, treated for abscess on left forearm from piece of metal.

4-H schedules grooming day

RISCO — Good Grooming Day at the Delta Center in Portageville has been scheduled on July 13 for Risco-New Hope 4-H Club members.

The 4-H'ers will also attend a July 9 meeting at the Farmers State Bank community room in Risco, where further instructions will be given about club projects.

Other highlights of the June meeting include assignments of the photography and entomology projects to be prepared for exhibit at the county fair to be held July 19 at the New Madrid County Trade School.

The program also featured a dog care and training demonstration by Nancy Cummings, a courtesy demonstration by Chris Hon and a travel report by Sherri Eakens who recently returned from Opryland, Tenn.

DAEOC to hold nurses aide and welding classes

BELL CITY— Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation is interested in starting nurse's aide classes, also welding classes in the Bell City, Advance, Puxico and Bloomfield areas.

Anyone interested in such courses should contact the DAEOC area opportunity center at Bell City, phone 733-4565. The classes are to run for approximately 26 weeks and will be free for those who qualify. If enough enrollees are received, classes could start July 23.

Morley plans fall festival

MORLEY— Morley Community Betterment Club recently met to set dates for the third annual Fall Festival. Dates have been set for Sept. 21 and 22. In the past, the festival has run only one day, but popularity has caused the town to plan a two day affair for 1973.

More plans will be announced later.

Man convicted in Grandin slayings gets 3 life terms

HILLSBORO— Jerry Wayne Rector, one of three men accused in the Jan. 17 extortion-murders of the Bob Kitterman family near Grandin, Thursday pleaded guilty to three counts of first degree murder and was sentenced to three concurrent life terms in prison.

Rector, represented by court appointed attorney Edward Friedewald of Poplar Bluff, was sentenced by Jefferson County Circuit Judge Philip G. Hess at Hillsboro. Ripley County Prosecuting Attorney James Hall represented the state at the hearing, which was on a change of venue.

A spokesman for the Jefferson County Circuit Clerk's office said Friday that Rector was transported to the Missouri penitentiary at Jefferson City Thursday night by sheriff's officers.

Dallas Ray Delay, the 33 year-old ex-convict who has admitted his role as the trigger man in the execution-style slayings in the woods of Ripley County, pleaded guilty to the crimes in April and was sentenced by Judge James T. Riley of Cole County to three consecutive life terms in prison.

The third defendant, Lloyd Dwaine Cowin, 20, Rector's first cousin who also lived in Van Buren awaits trial in Greene County Circuit Court at Springfield.

Burlison dedicates station

Desloge -- Speaking at the dedication of a new fire station this morning, 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison of Cape Girardeau stated, "Americans can congratulate themselves for developing a system that is responsive to the will of the people."

In his remarks Burlison used the new public building as an illustration of the responsiveness of government to the people. The building was funded with federal revenue-sharing money.

Citing the importance of rapport between the citizenry and their elected representatives, Burlison said, "Communication was established between the people of Desloge who wanted and needed a fire facility and their government officials who had the means to act on this need. This is successful politics operating at its most basic level."

Burlison concluded his remarks by commemorating the 197th anniversary of American independence, stating, "The people of Desloge have the opportunity to doubly celebrate this weekend. You can celebrate our nobel heritage of freedom and independence and you are able to celebrate the postive and tangible benefits that this heritage has brought you in the form of government service."

Mayor Tim Rice hosted the dedication ceremony which was accompanied by a barbecue and carnival.

NEW MADRID — Limited smoke damage was reported in a fire at 11:45 p.m. Friday at the home of Sis Kellum at Missouri and Brush Prairie streets.

No one was at home and the cause of the fire is undetermined.

2 fined in City Court

CHARLESTON — Two arrests were reported by police Friday. In City Court this morning Jerry Pendergrass of Charleston was fined $15 for running a stop sign and Armstead Cleaves of Charleston was fined $25 for speeding.

Allende asks state of siege

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Salvador Allende's leftist government asked Congress today to place Chile under a state of siege after loyal forces crushed a revolt by rebel army soldiers.

Eight persons, including six civlians, were killed and 34 were wounded in exchanges of gunfire between the rebels and loyal army troops and police who quickly quelled the Friday morning rush-hour rebellion.

Two of the civilian dead were a news photographer and a female reporter.

A state of emergency was declared throughout the country and Santiago Province was put under nighttime curfew.

Purse stolen at Plaza Mall

Carla Wood of East Prairie Route One reported her purse was stolen sometime between 9:30 and 10:10 p.m. Friday, according to police.

She said the purse was taken at one of three automobile agencies she visited or at Kingsway Plaza Mall. The purse and its contents were valued at $56.

Congressman not involved

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Congressman Richard Ichord, D-Mo., says he is not an active partner in the Houston, Mo., law firm of Lay, Ichord and Smith, although it carries his name.

"I haven't practiced law since 1961," Ichord said Friday from Washington, D.C.

He said he was notified by the Attorney General's office Thursday when Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth filed a State Supreme Court suit to oust Texas County Prosecutor Marvin L. Smith.

Smith, a member of the law firm with Hubert Lay, a member of the State Park Board, was charged with 15 violations, several alleging payoffs from persons who were charged with drunken driving or speeding.

Smith, a 27-year-old Democrat, was elected prosecutor last November, without opposition.

The suit asked that a fine of $10,000 be imposed.

One of the charges was that Smith took a check for $150 on April 24 from a man who was later not prosecuted on a summons of not checking a turkey with a conservation agent.

Ichord formed the law firm with Lay and allowed it to carry his name.

SBA announces new office hours

ST. LOUIS— Boyd Corder, Small Business Administration Eastern Missouri disaster branch manager, has announced that effective Monday the SBA Disaster Circuit Rider office sites and hours will be in Cape Girardeau from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Fridays at Arena Park Building and in Sikeston, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays in Sikeston Activity Center, 201 S. Kingshighway.

The circuit rider offices in Ste. Genevieve, Charleston and Caruthersville will close, effective Monday. Flood victims who are unable to visit a SBA circuit rider office in person may mail their applications to the SBA Disaster Branch Office, No. 5 American Industrial Drive, Maryland Heights, Mo. 63043.

The deadline for filing SBA disaster loan applications in Eastern Missouri has been extended to July 31. Any disaster victim who has not filed his application by the deadline is ineligible for any SBA property, (real or personal) disaster loan assistance.

Bond issues memo to conserve fuel

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond Friday directed state departments to use smaller autos, drive them slower, and get along with room temperatures a little warmer than usual — all to save fuel.

Bond issued a memo to department and commission directors and asked them to report on their energy-saving programs by July 15. The Office of Administration will monitor the program.

Bond said that while he has proposed a Missouri Energy council to deal with the fuel shortage, "there are measures that can be taken now — and our state government must clearly lead the way."

The governor said news cars which are budgeted or purchased should be small and more economical and with fewer optional devices, if possible.

"Travel on the highways should be at reduced speeds to conserve fuel...thermostats in each office should be set two-three degrees higher and always turned off at the end of the work day," The memo said.

Federal Reserve Board boosts discount rate to member banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board has boosted the discount rate it charges member banks for borrowing to a record-high 7 per cent in an inflation-fighting move that may push up interest rates across the economy.

The board also decided Friday to raise the reserve requirements of its member banks, meaning that banks that belong to the Federal Reserve System will have to keep on hand more cash in relation to their deposits.

The board said in taking the action that it was trying "to restrain continuing excessive expansion in money and credit."

The tight-money policies of central banks were designed to cool off the nation's economy, which has been expanding at a fast rate since the first of the year, and has touched off a surge of inflation.

Not since 1921, when the board's interest rate, known as the discount rate, was 7 per cent for a brief time at the New York regional bank, has the rate been so high. For the other banks of the system, the rate was the highest in history.

The Federal Reserve Board, through its ability to in effect create money through its policies, is responsible for the nation's monetary policy. It can determine whether the nation goes through periods of tight or easy money.

The discount rate change, from 6½ per cent, is effective Monday. All but the Richmond regional bank will begin charging the new rate then, and it is expected to raise its rate to 7 per cent later next week.

The reserve requirements were increased by ½ of 1 per cent on all but the first $2 million of net demand deposits held by member banks.

The new reserve requirement will be effective in the computation period starting July 19, but it will apply to deposits held between July 5 and July 11.

Canada issues embargo on high protein exports

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The world fretted over shrinking sources of protein today as Canada put into effect an embargo on the export of soybeans and related products similar to the new U.S. ban.

Canadian Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie announced the controls on Friday to the House of Commons in Ottawa. He said they were made necessary by uncertainties resulting from the American move Wednesday aimed at conserving supplies and holding down prices of fodder for cattle, hogs and poultry.

Throughout the world, soybeans are an increasingly important ingredient in animal feeds. In Japan, the beans are also a major, direct source of human food. The Japanese reacted with shock to the embargo by the United States, which is their main supplier.

Elsewhere, there were fears that feed shortages would be followed by shortages and higher prices of pork, poultry, eggs and milk.

A soybean allocation plan is to be announced in Washington next week. Purchasers in Japan and elsewhere who thought they had firm contracts for American soybeans waited to see to what extent they would be honored. European commodity traders marked time with private deals at inflated prices.

The Chicago Board of Trade ended a one-day suspension of soybean dealings but decided to limit the daily price fluctuation in crude soybean oil futures to one cent a pound.

After the U.S. embargo, the price of soybean meal skyrocketed from $439 to $625 a ton.

Britain's Financial Times said the problem is that the general shortage of protein supplies in the world, aggravated by the growing livestock population and the failure of the Peruvian fish meal catch, has driven more and more buyers to U.S. soybeans.

In Denmark, which imported 98 per cent of its soybeans from the United States in 1972, experts said the bans would speed inflation and create critical problems for farmers and certain industries.

Canada imported nearly 15 million bushels of soybeans last year from the United States. Gillespie said the Canadian controls would allow Canada to protect its needs and those of its traditional trading partners.

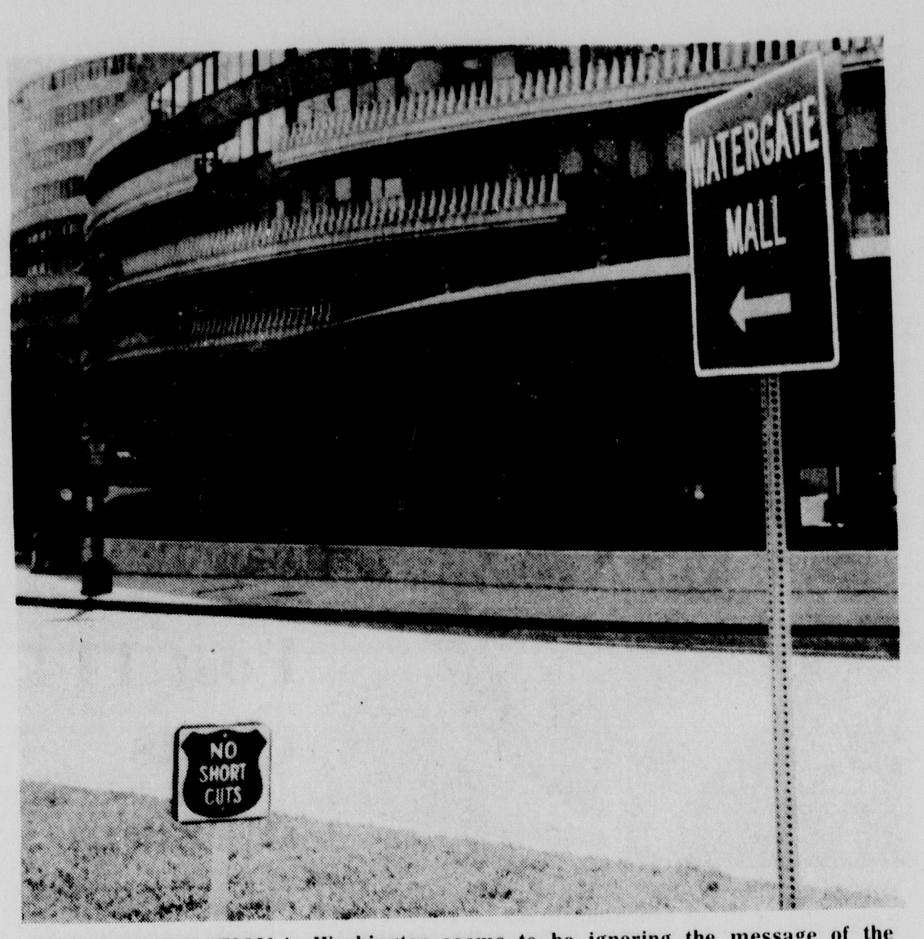
The Canadian embargo covered export of soybeans, flax, rapeseed, cottonseed and linseed oil and their byproducts.

Armstrong asks for reprimand

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Former congressman O. K. Armstrong is asking fellow Missouri Republican presidential electors of 1972 to send a 'severe condemnation of those persons who planned the attempted bugging and burglarizing of the Democratic National Heaquarters in the stupid, illegal Watergate affair."

He mailed his statement to the other electors Friday. He expressed complete confidence in the integrity of President Nixon.

Armstrong was elected to Congress in 1950 from the old 6th District.



THE INVESTIGATION in Washington seems to be ignoring the message of the small sign on the lawn of one of the city's better known business complexes.

Conferees work to salvage bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate conferees today will attempt to salvage a bill that would authorize a 5.6 per cent increase in Social Security benefits and, at the same time, extend the national debt ceiling so the Treasury can continue functioning.

The measure was defeated Friday night by a stunning 190-185 vote that blocked the House from formally considering it.

Without quick action today, the nation's $465 billion debt ceiling drops at midnight to $400 billion. The actual debt is approaching $460 billion. Without the extension, the Treasury could run out of operating funds in little over a week.

The necessity for immediate action forced Congress to virtually abandon its plan to start a week's recess today.

The bill the House killed Friday, with Republicans almost solidly opposing it, was a topheavy structure the Senate had built by piling unrelated amendments on a House-passed measure to extend the debt ceiling.

It included the Social Security increase, effective next April, a variety of other welfare and unemployment benefits, and such unrelated matters as a revision of the income tax checkoff for presidential campaign financing.

About half the cost of the Social Security and related benefits, estimated at more than $3 billion over two years, would have been financed by a payroll tax increase. But Republicans warned of a presidential veto because of the uncovered costs.

As they prepared for the new conference today, Democratic strategists worked on a plan to salvage most elements of the bill, including the Social Security provisions.

House resentment against the Senate for stacking unrelated elements on the original bill played a part in the defeat of the original measure.

"We are being cynically manipulated," Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., told the House.

Careful work required to salvage furniture

Salvaging furniture from high flood waters requires difficult and careful work. Marilyn Caselman equipment specialist in home management has prepared the following information on salvaging furniture.

Take all wooden furniture outdoors and remove as many of the drawers, slides, or other working parts as possible. These will probably be stuck tight. Do not force the drawers with a screw driver or chisel from the front. Remove the back by cutting it out if necessary and push out the drawers.

After the various moving parts of the furniture have been removed in this way, clean off all mud and dirt, using a hose stream if necessary, and then take them all indoors again and store them where they will dry out slowly. Do not leave them out in the sun as they will warp and twist out of shape.

Some furniture, especially that made of solid wood, may be salvaged by regluing. Gluing, however, is difficult to do at home because on many pieces it is necessary to use clamps. Before starting this task, decide whether it is worth investing in this equipment and whether you have the time and ability to do the work. If you find the work too difficult to attempt, consult a cabinetmaker.

Repairing veneered furniture is so difficult and requires so many different types of tools that it is not practical to try it at home. Get a cabinetmaker to do the job, or have the store from which you bought the furniture send it back to the factory to be repaired. If insurance allows part value on flood-damaged furniture, it may be worth while financially to apply the allowance on new articles rather than to pay for repairs on damaged items.

Furniture that has not been submerged may have developed white spots or a whitish film or cloudiness from dampness. If the whole surface is affected, try rubbing with a cloth wrung out of a mixture of one half cup of household ammonia and one half cup of water; wipe dry at once and polish with wax or furniture polish. For smaller areas or spots on varnished surfaces, rub with a cloth moistened with camphorated oil or oil of peppermint. A drop or two of ammonia on a damp cloth may do the work. Rub dry with a soft cloth and then polish. Cigarette ashes rubbed in with the finger tips are often effective in removing white spots. If all efforts to remove white blemishes are ineffective it may be necessary to refinish the furniture.

Brush any loose dirt from upholstered furniture and shampoo the fabric. Follow directions given for carpets and rugs. Work quickly. If there is mildew on the fabric, wipe it with a cloth wrung out of dilute alcohol (one cup denatured alcohol to one cup of water). Dry the furniture thoroughly.

If after cleaning, the upholstery looks faded or worn, a slip cover may be made using the method described in Mo. U. Circular No. 798---Make Your Own Chair Covers.

If furniture has been wet for a long time, the stuffing may have become mildewed or may ever have started to decay. It may be necessary to send the furniture to a reliable drycleaning or storage company for fumigating.

In cases of badly damaged upholstered furniture, especially any that has been submerged, stuffing may be so deteriorated that it needs to be replaced. Springs may need to be cleaned and oiled, and the frame cleaned. If much work is needed, the furniture should be sent to an experienced cabinetmaker of upholsterer unless you are confident of your own ability to do such work.

Mo. U. Ext. Circulars are available that give directions for upholstering and refinishing.

For further information on this subject, contact your County University Extension Center.

Next article in the series will be first aid for bedding and household linens by Mrs. Marilyn Caselman, equipment specialist.

Vending machine stolen

A newspaper vending machine valued at $65 was reported stolen from the lobby of Missouri Delta Community Hospital sometime Thursday night, according to police.

The machine had about $2 in change in the coin box.

New chancellor named at Mo. U.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Dr. Joseph R. Hartley, professor of business administration and former dean of academic affairs at Indiana University, was today named chancellor of the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

The appointment was approved at a meeting of the MU Board of Curators. It is effective Sept. 1.

Hartley succeeds Dr. Glen Driscoll, who resigned a year ago to become president of the University of Toledo.

The new chancellor is 42 and received his doctorate in business administration from Indiana U., where he maintained a perfect 4.0 grade record in all three of his degree programs.

"Rarely do you find a person possessing both the scholarly and administrative talents that Dr. Hartley has," said C. Brice Ratchford, MU president, who recommended Hartley.

Dr. Everett Walters has been serving as the chief administration officer of UMSL.

Hartley served as chairman of the Indiana U. committee on urban affairs. He worked with the Ford Foundation in reviewing and evaluating the University of Pittsburgh. He also worked with the Indiana Study Commission on Higher Education.

Hartley is married and has two children. A native of Portland, Ind., he became a professor of business administration at Indiana U. in 1963.

Default judgement dismissed

NEW MADRID — Authorization for the dismissal of a default judgment against John McCulloch and Mitchell Hogan Jr., as his successor, was received Friday after it was found by the office of Attorney General John C. Danforth that the judgment was paid several years ago by McCulloch.

The default judgment for $1,368.62 principal for delinquent sales tax, plus $136.86 penalty and three per cent monthly interest from June 10, 1965 was awarded Tuesday in New Madrid County Circuit Court to the State of Missouri against McCulloch and Hogan.

The court dismissed the case against Hogan Thursday for failure to obtain legal service of the petition on him.

According to Circuit Clerk Van H. Sharp, the old files were being cleared out and the file on the delinquent sales tax was put on the court docket by mistake.

Tribute to Photographer Edward Steichen on "Camera Three" July 1

A tribute to one of the world's great photographers is presented in "A Remembrance of Edward Steichen" on "Camera Three" Sunday, July 1 10:00 - 10:30 AM,) on the CBS Television Network. Steichen died this year at 93, a master of fashion, still-life, portrait, commercial and war photography, with various outstanding achievements behind him that he modestly termed "apprenticeships."

This film portrait, made when Steichen was 86, captures the photographer in remembrances of his life and artistic loves. At one time the foremost fashion photographer in New York, Steichen turned to portrait, commercial and still-life photography, excelling at all.

"The photographer establishes an intimate relationship between himself and what he is photographing, whether it's a can of beans or Greta Garbo," he once said.

He saw action in both world wars, with his major focus , as always, on nature and man. "Concentrate on the faces," he told his assistants. "The sips and planes will become obsolete, but not the faces."

The definitive statement of Steichen's artistic philosophy was "The Family of Man," a huge photographic exhibit he collected from around the world for the Museum of Modern Art --completed when he was 76.

This film was written by Jane Kramer and narrated by David Wayne. Merrill Brockway is the executive producer of "Camera Three" for WCBS-TV, CBS Owned station in New York.

Cards win in 10th

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A sore shoulder has kept Luis Melendez from playing full time but hasn't affected the St. Louis Cardinal outfielder's hitting.

Melendez, called on in a pinch role a second time in a week Friday night, banged a hit up the middle with two out in the tenth inning to sink the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1.

The single boosted Melendez' pinch-hitting to 4-for-6 and lifted the Cardinals to second place in the National League's East Division.

"I'd rather be playing than pinch-hitting," the 23-year-old Puerto Rican product said, "but I'll do anything if we win."

Melendez was called to pinchhit for Jose Cruz, a left-handed batter, after Phils southpaw Mac Scarce, 0-4, walked Ted Sizemore opening the final inning.

Tim McCarver's second sacrifice moved Sizemore over and Joe Torre was walked intentionally before Ted Simmons forced Torre at second.

Scarce worked the count to 12 against Melendez, but a fast ball on the next delivery was hit to the left of shortstop Larry Bowa's glove to score Sizemore.

"Last year I was a bad pinch-hitter," noted Melendez, who hit only 4-for-21 in such capacity.

"George Kissell (Cards coach) told me if Cruz got up to bat I might get a chance. I know Jose wasn't happy that I pinch-hit, but that's part of the game."

Cruz' grounder to the right side of the infield had chased home the only Cardinals run against Phils starter Wayne Twichell, who yielded four hits through nine innings.

Sizemore's single led off the eighth and Twitchell threw wide in fielding Mc'carver's first sacrifice to set up the tying run.

Priort to that, Cesar Tovor's bouncing double over third base and a two-out triple by Greg Luzinski in the fourth had staked Philadelphia to a 1-0 lead.

The Phillies, who had won 11 of 14 previous games, loaded the bases on Del Unser's single, a Luzinski double and an intentional walk to Tommy Hutton in the ninth.

But Cards reliever Diego Segui fanned Mike Schmidt on a fast ball and repelled the threat as Bob Boone lined to Sizemore at second base and Luzinski was doubled off.

Melendez, shelved eight days by the bad shoulder, also delivered a pinch-hit six nights earlier beating the Chicago Cubs.

Cards manager Red Schoendienst, noting approval, said the 165-pound center fielder would be back in the lineup for the second of a four-game series against the Phils tonight.

PB star to NWSU

NATCHITOCHES, La. — One of Missouri's top ten high school golfers, Brad Locke of Poplar Bluff, has been signed to a Northwestern State University golf scholarship by newly named Golf Coach Jack Herron.

Locke, considered the top player in the Southeast Missouri area, is a consistent par golfer on the tough and hilly courses in Southern Missouri. He was the medalist of his high school's district tournament and has won the Poplar Bluff City Tournament five years in a row.

A two- time winner of the PB Optimist Club award as the Outstanding Golfer in the area, Locke was among the top 15 golfers in the state all four years in high school, where he was an honor student.

Locke, who has shot numerous sub par rounds of golf, has a career best eight under par on a par 71 course.

Besides being a star golfer in high school, Locke also was a fine basketball player. He had several offers to play college basketball after leading Poplar Bluff Senior High in assists his senior year. The 6-foot- 1½ guard was also his team's third leading scorer.

"We think Brad will be one of the super freshmen players in the country next year," Coach Herron said of his first recruit. "We've made it to the national tournament for the last three years, but we haven't had anyone to shoot real great ... just average. I think Brad has the potential to be the golfer that could take us all the way."

Locke said he chose Northwestern because he likes the campus, the school and the coach. He also said he looks forward to playing golf more often due to Louisiana's warmer weather.

The Demon's latest recruit comes from an athletic family. Brad's father, Charles Locke, was a nine-year veteran of professional baseball.

Herons studied

Bootheel heron

The heron, familiar bird of Missouri's streams and shallows, gathers in flocks to nest. One heronry in southeast Missouri near Sikeston has some 5,000 birds in it — so many that the sheer number of birds may be killing the trees in which they nest.

An aging stand of shortleaf pines, isolated on all sides by cultivated fields, is proving to be one of the most important heronries in Missouri-- at least for the time being.

The heronry, near Sikeston, has an estimated 5,000 herons-- mostly little blue herons, but also including cattle egrets, black-crowned night herons, common egrets and snowy egrets.

Paul Heye, associate professor of biology at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau, has studied the area since 1965 and has seen the population climb from 2,700 nests to a high of 4,900 in 1972, with an average of 4,200.

But there are problems with the heronry. One is that the sheer number of birds may be killing the seven acres of pines. Another is the possibility of disturbance from visitors to nearby Rainbow Lake.

The birds tolerate some disturbance-- Interstate 55 is within a half mile of the heronry-- but very close contact could result in the birds picking up and leaving.

It happened once before, in 1968, when the herons left a nest site near Bertrand. Heye thinks the fact that a pair of great horned owls nested in the pine stand before the herons arrived may have discouraged them and caused them to move to the present pine stand.

Heye and Dr. Leigh H. Fredrickson, director of the University of Missouri's Gaylord Memorial Laboratory at Puxico, think evidence indicates a declining population of herons in North America, despite the rise in population of the Scott County heronry.

"Protection of the herons from disturbance and from outright killing is the best immediate means of protection for this wildlife resource," Heye says.

Harold Holland, district forester for the Department of Conservation, and Jack Boyles, Duck Creek Wildlife Area manager, also checked the heronry.

They found the pine stand stagnated and dying-- partly because the trees never had been thinned since they were planted. But the herons are nesting in dead trees as well as live ones, so any timber management would hurt the heronry.

Since the birds moved once, obviously they could move again, but since the Bootheel area is intensively farmed, there are few tree stands left suitable for a heron nest site.

"It's possible that the birds will kill the entire stand within five years if the present amount of use is continued," Boyles says. In addition to the other problems, there is some hint of industrial development along I- 55 in the vicinity of the heronry which almost certainly would put an end to it."

Royals struggle

Luis Melendez's 10th-inning single produced a 2-1 victory for the St. Louis Cardinals over Philadelphia Friday night while the Kansas City Royals succumbed to the one-hit pitching of the Texas Rangers' Jim Bibby.

The Phillies scored first at St. Louis when Cesar Tovar doubled and Greg Luzinski tripled in the fourth inning. The Cards tied it in the eighth on Ted Sizemore's single, an error, a walk and Jose Cruz's bases-loaded single.

Sizemore opened the 10th with a walk and Tim McCarver sacrificed him to second. Joe Torre was walked, then Melendez batted for Cruz and whacked the winning single.

In Texas, the Rangers blanked Kansas City 3-0 for the Royals' fifth straight loss as Bibby got his first pitching victory in the American League. It was his third start since he was acquired from the St. Louis Cardinals June 6.

The Royals' only hit was Fran Healy's lead-off double in the sixth. Mark Littell, Royals' rookie, gave up one run and five hits before Bruce Dal Canton took over in the seventh. Littell's record is 1-2.

Texas scored in the first inning on Dave Nelson's double, a bunt and an infield out.

Buys loses

NOVATO, Calif. — Greg Buys of Kennett, Mo., continued to have his trouble in the minor leagues last week, working on two innings of a game and being credited with the defeat.

Buys, transferred from the Florida State league to the Eastern AA division with the West Haven Yanks, gave up six hits, three walks and fanned only three while his earned run average balooned to 7.50. The big righthander has recorded a 2-3 season mark, working 18 innings, allowing 18 hits, 17 walks while fanning 15.

SPORTS

GOLF

ATLANTA — Newcomer Laura Baugh, 18, fired a threeunder-par 70 to share the lead after the first round of the $30,000 Lady Tara Golf Classic with veteran Sandra Haynie.

FOOTBALL

HORSE RACING

NEW YORK — Blessed Angelica, $6.40, won the $20,000 Miz Clementine Purse by a neck at Aqueduct.

OCEANPORT, N.J. — Mongongo, $12.20, copped the $8,500 feature at Monmouth Park.

BOSTON — Pilot Knob, $4, romped to an easy victory in the $14,000 feature at Suffolk Downs.

The only handicap to hiring me is not knowing where to find me.

You won't find guys like me selling pencils on street corners. We're skilled, able-bodied workers. We're industrial designers. Salespeople. Secretaries. Managers. Accountants. Technicians. Blue collar and white collar.

Unfortunately, though, too many of us are unemployed.

And the irony of it is, it's not that men and women like yourself don't want to hire us. It's simply that you don't know how to go about it.

Every state in this country has a Department of Vocational Rehabilitation. Its function is not only to evaluate a person's disabilities and to help him rehabilitate himself. But to help place him in a job that allows him to fulfill his capabilities.

If you are interested in tapping your state's supply of hard-working, capable men and women, write to your State Director of Vocational Rehabilitation. His office is located in your state capital.

Tell him what kind of business you're in. What job openings need to be filled. The background, experience and skills required.

He'll be more than happy to put you in touch with the right people for your company or organization. People who will appreciate the opportunity to help your company grow. Who will work to their fullest potential. And help your company —and our nation—prosper.

Frank White, grad of Academy

KANSAS CITY (AP)— The Kansas City Royals wasted no time pinning a nickname on rookie Frank White.

White has been known as "Academy Frank" since the day he was called up by the Royals from their Omaha farm club in the American Association.

The nickname was a natural. White is the first graduate of the Royals Baseball Academy at Sarasota, Fla., to don a major league uniform.

"No, I didn't think when I went to the academy in 1970," says White, a shortstop and second baseman, "I'd ever play with Kansas City. I always hoped..."

White's hopes became reality less than three weeks ago when shortstop Fred Patek was placed on the 15-day disabled list. After playing second base at Omaha, White was inserted into the Kansas City lineup at shortstop.

"I've already found out one thing," the 22- year- old White says, "I can play defense up here. It will take a little while to get to hitting... at least one time around the league."

Baseball isn't new to White as it is for many of the prospects who wind up at the academy, founded three years ago by Royale owner Ewing Kauffman as a spawning ground for major league material. Academy Frank has been playing baseball since he was 13.

"I didn't play baseball in high school," White notes, "but I played Connie Mack, Ban Johnson and Casey Stengel League baseball."

White used to climb up in the football bleachers at Lincoln High School, located on a hill outside old Municipal Stadium where the Athletics and then the Royals used to play, and nibble on barbeque and watch the games night after night. Yes, and dream of becoming a big league ball player.

"I saw a lot of stars play in the stadium," White recalls. "And I had two idols...Hank Aaron and Jackie Robinson. I never saw Robinson but I always admired the things he stood for and what he accomplished."

White might never have tried out for the academy if it hadn't been for his wife, Gladys. He was working as a shipping clerk when he heard about the academy tryouts.

"They invited me to come over," White explains, "and I put it off for a couple of days. I don't think I would have ever gone if it wasn't for my wife. She wanted me to give it a try."

White went through the running, throwing, hitting and infield routines and the speed tests.

"Norm Siebern was a scout for the Royals," White says. "He was watching me and said I looked like a hitter. He liked the way I ran and the way I threw."

During his brief time with Kansas City, White has made some sensational plays in his shortstop role. He has impressed Manager Jack McKeon.

Greer homers

Long pitched Sikeston Standard to a 6-4 win over Collins and Kingsway Plaza coasted to a 12-1 victory over Nunnelee in the Musial Little League Friday night.

Moore and Greer were the hitting powers for the Standard. Moore hit a double and Greer blasted a round tripper. Sikeston Standard held a 6-2 lead in the fourth and had to struggle to keep Collins from threatening. Carr, the losing pitcher, also had the only extra base hit of the game for Collins with a double.

Nunnelee scored their only run in the first inning and failed to move any farther against Kingsway Plaza. Tied at 1-all for the first two innings, Kingsway finally broke through to take slim lead by two. But continued steady play produced consistent runs for Kingsway, with their strongest inning coming in the fourth when they came around the bases five times. Williams, the winning pitcher, had a double. Hammock and Buchannan both hit doubles for Nunnelee. Bickford suffered the loss.

Eagles, Nowell lose Jr. games

Davis & Bird won a 5-2 decision over Eagles and Home Materials downed Nowell 14-7 in Friday night's Jr. Babe Ruth League.

Boardman was working on a no-hitter but the Eagles finally broke through and gained two hits off of him in the fourth inning. No score was made for the Eagles until the sixth when a single run was brought around. Davis & Bird had built up a small lead during the early innings but were able to withhold the Eagles attempts to threaten. The only extra base hit of the game came with a triple from Shell of D & B. Russell pitched the game for Eagles.

Wright and Laseter led the hitting for Home Materials to help carry them to the win. Both were two-for- two at bat with one of the hits being a double. Home Materials held a steady pace in scoring to build up a lead over Nowell. Nowell had a big inning in the fourth, scoring five, but could not add to it to overtake Home Materials. Dockins was the winning and Newman the losing pitcher.

Missouri Elk

JEFFERSON CITY— Old No. EE 6987 remains, as he has remained for more than three years--a conundrum all wrapped up in an enigma.

The basic puzzle is: how did a Wyoming tagged elk come to be killed for a white-tailed deer in the middle of Osage County, Missouri?

Even if the creature sprouted wings and flew from his last known home, he had a 750 mile flight before touching down in Missouri.

The elk was killed during the 1969 deer season in Missouri and the hunter who did it is above suspiction. He thought the elk was a deer and, when he found it, it wasn't reported to the conservation agent.

Since then, various people in the Department of Conservation have tried to find out how the elk got so far from home, but the trail leads only as far as Lusk, Wyo., in the southeast part of the state, and there it disappears.

The elk bore two tags, one a Wyoming Game and Fish Commission tag and the other a U.S. Department of Agriculture brucellosis- test tag. Both have been checked out.

Dr. R.L. Pyles, veterinarian in charge of the USDA office in Jefferson City checked through USDA files and found that the elk was one of 51 tested for brucellosis in January, 1968. It was trapped in Yellowstone National Park in northwest Wyoming and released near Lusk.

George Kaminski, information chief for the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission, confirmed the USDA history.

"The elk was tagged in January, 1968, as a male calf and released in Rawhide Buttes near Lusk," he writes. "It is possible the elk transplanted from Yellowstone could have moved out of the area. It was reported that one of these elk moved into southern Colorado and was harvested at the Trinchera Ranch."

If so, that's a 300- mile odyssey and would involve a detour around the heavily populated Denver area. Perhaps the 47 elk that were released near Lusk had an unusual amount of elk wanderlust?

But at least the Lusk-Trinchera elk stuck with the Rocky Mountains. It's hard to believe an elk crossed Nebraska and/or Kansas and half of Missouri, except possibly as a guest in someone's railroad car or truck.

That is the other possibility-- that the elk was illegally rustled from Wyoming and sold or released in Missouri. Obviously no one is going to come forward and confess to elk rustling.

But there is no evidence to suggest anyone rustled No. 6987 either.

So No. Ee 6987 remains a mystery within a conundrum all wrapped up in an enigma. Perhaps he should be given a name instead of a number. How about "Cotton- Eyed Joe?" Remember the lyrics? "Where did you come from?/ Where did you go?/ Where did you come from, Cotton-Eyed Joe?"

Eftink stars

CHAFFEE— Ricky Eftink made rather easy work of Sikeston Friday night, limiting the 13- year old all- stars to two hits and pitching Chaffee into the state tournament at Ft. Leonardwood next week.

The curve- ball artist baffled Sikeston batters throughout the seven inning contest and held them scoreless for three innings. Eftink fanned nine batters and walked six.

Sikeston started the evening with a 3- 1 decision over Chaffee behind the two hit hurling of Francis to force the second and deciding game.

Thursday night Sikeston won a doubleheader, beating Tri- County and East Prairie to move into the finals.

Gary Little provided the hitting for Chaffee, going three for six in the two games.

Vanduser loses

Vanduser was dropped by Scott City 13-7 in Friday night play of the SEMO Softball League.

Vanduser picked up an early lead going ahead of Scott City 4-2. But Scott City remained in the game when Mark Amick hit a grand slam which gave them the advantage. Dover came back in the third for Vanduser when he slapped a three- run homer which brought the game to a tie. Vanduser faded away after that big play while Scott City went on and scored six more times to take the win. Earl Cottner had the win and Bill Gillian suffered the loss.

Longstreet stars

Kiwanis picked up a National Little League win over Lions, 9-3, Friday night.

The score was tied at 1-1 in the first inning and remained so until Kiwanis came around for two runs in the fourth. The following inning, Kiwanis added six additional runs for insurance to take the win as the Lions rally fell short. Smith, Garrett, Stinnett and Echols all hit doubles for Kiwanis. Lions' Longstreet was three-for- three, slapping out a double and triple. Throop also added a home run for the Lions. Campbell was on the mound for Kiwanis while Braden took the loss for the Lions.

DOES HOLLYWOOD SUCCESS COST TOO MUCH?

A startled Poteet Canyon gets an unexpected phone call from Virgilia Downspout, flamboyant editor of a popular women's magazine.

Ms. Downspout offers Poteet, ace girl journalist and former ward of Colonel Steve Canyon, a fascinating free- lance assignment to cover the seamy side of life in the New Hollywood.

First, she is to answer a "Talent Wanted" advertisement aimed at overeager young people. Then go to the film capital and report on what really awaits them there.

Does Hollywood success cost too much? Is it right to discourage youngsters from going there to seek fame and fortune?

Poteet Canyon finds some surprising answers, and gets a close look at her own motives in accpeting the assignment, in the fast- moving new story in --

Price jump pushes parity ratio to 15 year high

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 6 per cent jump in prices farmers received in the month ending June 15, including boosts for soybeans, corn, hogs and wheat, pushed the Agriculture Department's parity ratio to the highest level in 15 years.

The parity ratio, a cost-price relationship based on the period 1910-14, was 88 per cent at mid-June, the department reported Friday. Farm prices are theoretically in balance with those producers pay out to meet expenses when the ratio is 100 per cent.

According to USDA records, the June 15 parity was the highest since March 1958. It was 85 in May and 74 a year earlier. Although the prices farmers pay to meet expenses rose 2 per cent to another record high, those they received advanced much faster.

Soybeans, in so short a supply that the Nixon administration has decided to ration exports, averaged a record $10 per bushel, up from $8.27 in May and $3.32 a year ago.

Hogs were $37.20 per hundredweight at mid-June compared with $35.20 in May and the record high of $38.30 last March.

Corn was $1.99 per bushel, up from a May average of $1.61 and a year-earlier level of $1.13 per bushel.

Wheat, at $2.43 per bushel, eclipsed the season igh of $2.38 set last winter and was the most in more than 25 years, the department said. The May wheat average was $2.15 and a year ago was $1.33 a bushel.

High soybean prices, which triggered an embargo on exports earlier this week and promises of regulated shipments overseas in the future, are expected to stimulate a boost in production this year.

The American Soybean Association, Hudson, Iowa, said Friday that a survey among producers showed that soybean plantings this year will be 56.3 million acres, up nearly 20 per cent fron the 47 million farmers planted for harvest in 1972.

That is about in line with what USDA officials expect soybean plantings to be, but the association said yields this year may be down slightly from 1972 to around 27.3 bushels per acre. That would mean a crop of about 1.51 billion bushels, a little less than the department's projection of 1.55 billion.

The department will issue on July 10 a report showing updated figures for plantings of soybeans and other spring crops.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department, although abandoning its "Plentiful Foods" program, still is ving promotional assistance to farm products it says need marketing assistance.

The Plentiful Foods program, started in 1945, officially will end Aug. 1. It was designed as a monthly service to let consumers know of specific commodities which were expected to be in fjture abundance and therfore good buys at stores.

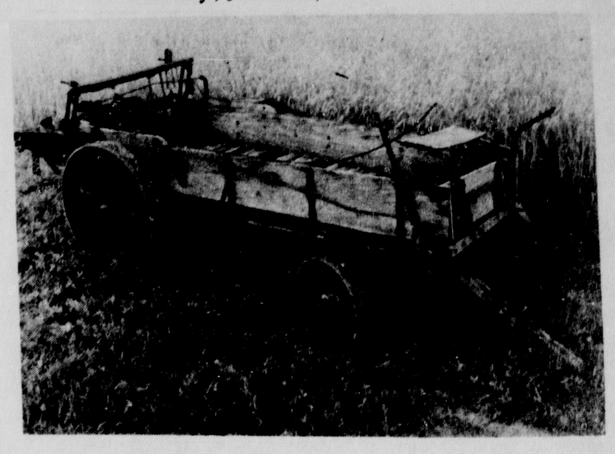
But such items have been scarcer lately and the department decided a few weeks ago to cancel the plantiful foods program. Beef, for example, had not been on the monthly list since June 1967. Instead, products such as beans, corn meal and grits have been featured.

The USDA said, however, that market promotion would be continued as required when specific situatimns arose. This week officials announced that fresh Bartlett pears and sweet cherries will be in larger-than usual supply during July.

Consequently, the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said it is cooperating with the food industry and the news media in efforts to promote the two fruits.

Egret in search of food

Perhaps this isn't what might be thought of as a typical farming scene in the Sikeston area, but it is a very common sight that shows one of the many natural friends of Bootheel agriculture. The bird is a Cattle Egret, one of several species of similar birds which summer in the Bootheel and forage for their food by following farm animals and at times tractors. When the animals move through grass, stirring up insect pests, the Cattle Egret will jab out with its long bill and grab a tasty lunch. Flocks of dozens of the birds may be seen in a large herd in search of food. (Daily Standard photo by Tim Ludwig)



A link with the past

Farming this year certainly isn't what it used to be. Due to the heavy rains and flooding of the past few months, many area farmers are still wondering when and what to plant. Farming isn't the same in other ways, too, such as the equipment in almost universal use on midwest farms. This ancient and unused manure spreader is a remnant of a time when horses were almost the only horse power used on a farm. Now it stands dormant beside a field of wheat just south of Morley on Highway 61.

Weather outlook for the Bootheel

By LEONARD F. HAND

The 30-day weather outlook for the Missouri Bootheel through the month of July looks for a continuation of trends established in June. Temperatures are expected to average below the Normal for this time of year, and rainfall is assigned to the near normal category.

This combination suggests that high pressure will continue to divert moisture from the Gulf of Mexico through Texas to the southwest. That pattern was established during the latter half of June, and accounted for the change to a more scattered and less massive rainfall distribution for the Bootheel. The heavier and more vigorous activity followed a course to the north, as the track of primary low pressure centers shifted in that direction. Most of Missouri is slated for above normal July precipitation, with the southern fringe of the state falling within the Near Normal category.

High pressure systems crossing the Nation would be the source of both cooler and less humid air being drawn into the region from the west and north. This would be compatible with the more static character of high pressure preventing a moist southerly flow from reaching the Mid-south for as long a duration as usual this time of year.

One feature of near normal July rainfall is that it provides less assurance of either sufficient volume, or equal distribution of water to Bootheel farms. We saw some of this in late June when farmers were looking for rains to replenish moisture in dry seedbeds for soybean germination and emergence. Since much of our rain will be delivered by electrical storms, variability will also be a predictable feature.

Open weather for cultivating should be well monitored by following trends outlined in the Extended Outlooks issued daily by the National Weather Service. These will also be the best guides for anticipating wind conditions favorable for orchard spraying and, later in the month, sorghum midge control. Corn heat stress is not as likely to show up under the pattern outlined.

Area Entomological Specialist Flernoy Jones, in his weekly Cotton Insect Report, indicates that spider mites were not problems as June drew to an end. Cooler than normal temperature averages for July may maintain lower incidence of this pest which prospers under hot weather conditions. He also emphasises need to watch plant bug populations for needed controls if the highest percentage of early set fruit is to be protected. Both Southwestern and European corn borers had shown up in numbers calling for control before the end of June. Several of the usual insect problems are likely to be complicated by the late character of the season, as well as weather trends.

Water stress should not be as critical as in some previous years. Most crops are spreading roots into fully charged subsoil moisture reservoirs. Although Normal July rainfall is less than 3 and 1/2 inches, present water content will carry the demand by cotton and soybeans. Corn, may be the exception, calling for about 8 inches of water during the month, and usually occupying land with lower water holding capacity.

Noteworthy during June, particularly the latter half, was the slacking off of heavy and persistent rains. With flooding problems out of the picture, the increased duration between wettings was as beneficial as the lowered volume of rain gage catches. Total rainfall at Agricultural Weather Stations from June 1 through 29, when this outlook was prepared, ranged from: 2.39 inches at Kennett, to 2.69 at Charleston, 2.95 at Malden, 3.59 at Sikeston, 5.72 at Poplar Bluff and 5.79 inches at Portageville.

Normal rainfall for the Bootheel as a whole in July is 3.34 inches. Normal for individual Bootheel cities are:

Cape Girardeau 2.85 inches, Dexter 3.22 inches, Fisk 3.29 inches, New Madrid 3.79 inches, Poplar Bluff 3.33 inches, Caruthersville 3.56 inches, Doniphan 3.72 inches, Morehouse 2.86 inches, Parma 3.45 inches and Sikeston 3.12 inches.

Short term averages for other cities: Advance 3.18 inches, Bloomfield 3.34 inches, Clearwater Dam 2.69 inches, Kennett 3.17 inches, Portageville 3.48 inches, Wappapello Dam 3.35 inches, Bernie 3.44 inches, Charleston 3.41 inches, Deering 3.23 inches, Malden 3.37 and Puxico 3.07.

Long term records show that for July with near normal rainfall, averages range from 3.41 inches at Poplar Bluff, to 3.14 at Sikeston, and 3.35 inches at Caruthersville. Under those conditions rainfall totals have ranged from 2.75 to 4.00 inches at Poplar Bluff, from 2.45 to 3.82 inches at Sikeston, and from 2.48 to 4.01 inches at Charleston.

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — Massive fossilized tree trunks, believed to be oaks which grew 300 million years ago, have been found in a deep coal mine.

Dr. Friedrick Schmidt-Bleek, a chemistry professor at the University of Tennessee, said the petrified trunks weigh six tons and are about 45 inches in diameter.

"The amazing thing to me is that these trees were found in an upright formation," he said.

Cities and Counties benefit from soil survey reports

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles by Scott County District Soil Conservationist Jerry T. Harlow describing the benefits and uses of soil surveys.

More uses can be made of soil survey information by city and county governments than any other individual or group of individuals.

Ronald Yersak, planning director of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission, says the planning commission uses the generalized soils surveys in its regional planning program. Information contained in the regional general soils survey was used in both the commission's solid waste management plan and recreation plan for parks and open space. The commission also requests the Soil Conservation Service to provide generalized soils maps for various municipalities in the Bootheel when under contract to prepare a local comprehensive plan.

Information contained in these documents enables the planning commission staff to develop a future land use map for the municipalities or, when doing regional studies, it is used as a tool to guide the planning staff in determining the best land use purpose."

Soil survey information can be used as a basis for land evaluation by county governments. Monroe County is planning to use its soil survey for this very purpose.

Soils information is an important factor in zoning for a city or county. Soils vary widely in their characteristics. Some are well suited for a particular use, but are poorly suited for another.

City and county governments use soils information, when available, to determine the best routes for water and sewer lines. They also use soils interpretations to determine road construction methods that will result in reduced maintenance.

The lise of uses is almost unlimited. Many of our county and city officials are realizing that a soil survey is phase one of good planning. With the right information they can get ahead of the bulldozer and prevent problems before they occur.

Eliminates dumps

Soil surveys are used to locate suitable sites for sanitary landfills.

Butler farmer trading jobs

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles featuring Farm Families of the year in five Bootheel counties.)

By PAT GROJEAN

HARVIELL— Mr. and Mrs. Garland C. Boswell, Butler County Farm Family of the Year, are not going to be farmers any more. Boswell has sold all but 55 acres of his farm, but kept his house.

His main source of income now will be the C. and G. Welding Shop in Naylor. He is planning to build a new building and add a farm supply store to his welding business. It will probably be September or October before he opens the new store Boswell said. Why is he abandoning farming? "I figure maybe I can make more money on what I have invested," Boswell said.

He had been farming about seven years 16 miles southwest of Poplar Bluff. On the remaining land he has 19 head of cattle which he raises and sells as feeders.

Boswell opened his welding shop in Naylor in 1968. From this shop he made service calls to farmers in the area. The welding shop and farm each probided about half of the family's income.

Boswell has been a welder for about 18 years, working in construction before farming.

Boswell is a member of the Naylor school board and the Naylor Lions Club.

Mrs. Boswell graduated with highest honors from Three Rivers Community College Friday night. This marked the completion of Registered Nursing School for her. She will shortly begin work as an RN in the Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Mrs. Boswell has been working in hospitals for 21 years.

The Boswell's have one son, Kevin, who is 15.

When asked if he had any interesting experiences while farming, Boswell replied, "All experiences were interesting."

Pride of Butler County

Hard work and accomplishments earned Mr. and Mrs. Garland C. Boswell of Harviell the honor and certificate they received in March as Butler County Farm Family of the Year. But the Boswells are not going to be farmers any more. They have sold most of their farm and Boswell plans to build a new welding shop in Naylor and add a farm supply store to it. Ann Landers

Former addict tells his story

Dear Ann Landers: If you publish this letter it will probably take up your whole column, but it will be worth it if you can save just one kid from going through the hell I experienced trying to get off the hard stuff.

I am a former heroin addict now in the methadone program. I was shooting dope regularly for two years. I missed very few days and the days I did miss I was sick as a dog with stomach cramps, throwing up all over. I had to spend at least $50 a day just so I wouldn't get sick and I wasn't even getting high.

My best friends were mainliners. I was very close to five guys and every one of them is dead now. Two O.D.'s and three died of hepatitis from dirty needles. I got hepatitis myself last year. My girl caught it from me and so did my sister. We were all in the hospital at the same time. My sister very nearly didn't make it. (Can you imagine my quilt?)

Even though I'm off the stuff now I can't get a decent job because I have to take a physical. When the doc sees the tracks on my arms he knows I was an addict and it goes on my record. Nobody wants an ex-junkie.

Almost everybody who shoots has to push the stuff in order to support the habit. My best friend was my partner. We lived in constant fear of getting busted. The penalty in this state is life imprisonment.

Trafficking in dope means going to the worst neighborhoods in the world. I've seen guys killed for $5 worth of snow or a lid of horse. There's a lot more I could tell you but this letter is already too long. Like when your parents find out about you -- you'll want to kill yourself. I mean it. And I could tell you about some of the chicks on the street. I saw them when they first started hustling. Really beautiful. After six months of prostitution, they look like their own grandmothers. By the way, I started on pot, like all the other needle freaks and acid heads I know. Don't let anybody tell you different. Sign me --- Straightening Out In Massapequa And It's A Rough Go.

Dear S. M.: Here's your letter --- every bit of it --- and I didn't change a word. Thank you for writing and my hat is off to you, fella.

Dear Ann Landers: Several months ago we were invited to an elaborate wedding, complete with reception, dinner and the works. It must have cost a fortune. Yesterday a friend who is close to the bride's family told me she knew for a fact that the couple did not have a marriage license and they didn't sign any papers. It was a phony ceremony.

It seems the groom's divorce didn't come through in time for the second marriage to be valid, so they decided that since the invitations had been sent out and the plans were made, they would go ahead [illegible] by a J.P. or something. They actually did get married the following month by a judge.

I believe the guests were taken advantage of and I, for one, feel like a fool. I'd like to let the couple know that it was a dirty thing to do to the guests. My husband says to forget it. What do you say, Ann? -- Feeling Foolish in Suffolk

Dear Foolish: The couple was obviously caught in a web of unfortunate circumstances and they solved their delimma in the way that seemed best to them. I'm with your husband.

Lillian Raby, Stan Evans unite in June ceremony

ESSEX -- Amid a setting of blue candles, white and blue mums and greenery, Miss Lillian Mae Raby became the bride of Stanley Keith Evans at 8 p.m. June 9 in Taylor General Baptist Church at Essex. The Rev. Carl Robbins of Puxico officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Miss Raby is the daughter of Dorothy Raby of Kansas City and the granddaughter of Mr. Lillian Butler of Dexter with whom whe has been living. Evans is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hollon G. Evans of Essex.

The bride chose for her wedding a floor-length gown of sheer organza. The A-line dress featured a chapel-length train and bishop sleeves which tapered to a point. Lace and seed pearls accented the front of the dress and the yoke. The edge of the train and shoulders and cuffs of the dress were also dressed in lace.

Her elbow-length veil was held secure with a Juliet headpiece of lace and pearls. She carried a cascading bouquet of white gladioli with blue roses and blue ribbons.

Debby North of Cape Girardeau was matron of honor and Linda Raby, sister of the bride, and Pam Palmer were bridesmaids. They wore blue crepe, Victorian-styles, floor-length gowns and blue veils with crepe bows. Each carried blue mums with white pompoms surrounding.

Miss Lori Hume was flower girl and wore a dress styled like the ones worn by bridesmaids. She carried a white basket with blue mum petals.

Perry Evans served his brother as best man and Keith Cates of Dexter and Dale Connor were groomsmen. The groom wore a black tuxedo and the groomsmen wore blue tuxedos.

Kevin Evans, nephew of the groom, was ringbearer.

The bride's mother wore a floor-length turquoise knit dress with white accessories and the mother of the groom wore a pink knit dress with sheer sleeves and white accessories. The bride's grandmother wore a blue knit dress with gold accessories. All three wore a white rose corsage.

A reception followed the ceremony at the church. The couple honeymooned in Springfield and Branson and now lived in Cape Girardeau where he attends Southeast Missouri State University.

The new Mrs. Evans is a 1972 graduate of Dexter High School, and Evans is a 1973 graduate of Richland High School at Essex.

Miss Yarbrough is June bride of Carl Barnett

Miss Rhonda Yarbrough and Carl Barnett were married in a candlelight ceremony at 8 p.m. June 14 at Shady Acres Church of Christ by the minister, Manly Luscombe.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Yarbrough, 303 Kennedy Drive, and Barnett's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Barnett, 202 Lions St.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore an original gown designed by her aunt, Brenda Miller. The white satin dress featured a flounced hemline and Victorian collar. White re-embroidered lace accented the botton of the gown along the flounce and the front of the dress to the empire waist. The leg of mutton sleeves cuffs were also overlaid with lace. The gown featured a long train and chapel-length veil of illusion edged in re-emboidered lace. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white gardenias with streamers and greenery.

Kim Yarbrough, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of orange polyester overlaid with dotted Swiss and matching picture hat with white daisies and ribbon. She carried a wicker basket of white daisies with multi-colored bow and streamers.

Kim Bailey, Connie Marble, Gail Dyer and Cindy Lambert were bridesmaids and wore dresses identical to the one worn by the maid of honor except in shades of pink, lilac, green and blue. They wore picture hats trimmed with white daisies and ribbon, to match the dresses. All carried wicker baskets of white daisies and multi-colored bows and streamers.

Candlelighters were Cindy Bass and Bonnie Marble. They wore dresses of yellow dotted Swiss made like those of the other attendants and also wore picture hats to match. The girls wore wrist corsages with multi-colored bows.

Darrell Alsup was best man and groomsmen were David Hough, Charlie Dye, Doug Griffen and Steve Lambert. Groomsmen also served as ushers.

The men were attired in white brocade tuxedos with rainbow-colored ruffled shirts trimmed in black. They also wore black bowties and lily of the valley boutonnieres.

Mrs. Yarbrough, the mother of the bride, chose a deep aqua floor-length dress of polyester chiffon over taffeta lining. Mrs. Barnett wore a pink dress of polyester knit. Both mothers wore gardenia corsages.

The bride's grandmothers and great-grandmother, Mrs. Rutha Lawrence, Mrs. Ozella Yarbrough and Mrs. Lottie Lawrence, also wore gardenia corsages.

Marsha Lawrence, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a floor-length dress of blue dotted Swiss fashioned like those worn by the bride's attendants and carried a wicker basket of white daisies.

Kevin Miller, cousin of the bride, was ringbearer and wore a black tuxedo and wore a blue ruffled shirt to match the flower girl's ensemble.

Debbie Campbell presided at the guest book and was attired in a floor-length floral dress of organza. She wore a corsage of mixed color daisies.

Those serving at the reception were Debi Dewitt of Chicago and Brenda Miller, aunts of the bride, and Liz Ferrell, sister-in-law of the groom. They wore floor-length dresses of different pastel shades and corsage of mixed daisies.

The bride's table was covered with white tablecloth overlaid with white net and trimmed with bows of multi-colored ribbons.

The four-tiered cake centered the table and on each side was a flower arrangement of multi-color daisies and two candelabras. There was a large punch bowl on each end of the table. Silver serving dishes were used to serve nuts and mints.

The couple lives at 301 Branum St.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding included: Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Thomas and Lisa and Clay of Omaha, Neb., Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Cashon and Mrs. Paul Loiseau of Cape Girardeau; and Mrs. Edward Pace, Mrs. Patsy Walters, Mrs. Relton Pace and Mrs. Thelma Trammel of Arkansas.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Barnett and Mrs. and Mrs. Barry Ferrell, parents and sister of the groom, entertaned the wedding party with a rehearsal dinner June 12 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ferrell.

The bride was honored with a bridal shower June 5 in the fellowship room of Shady Acres Church of Christ. Mrs. Bill Marble, Mrs. Kenneth Campbell and Mrs. Ben Chambers were hostesses.

On June 11, Kim Bailey, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Carl Bailey, hosted a shower in honor of the bride.

Citizens needed for participation in justice system

A meeting, cosponsored by The Southeast Division of the Missouri Association for Social Welfare, Knights of Columbus and the Dexter and Sikeston Jaycees, was held Sunday at the Heritage House Senior Citizens Home, 305 Cresap St.

In his address, Lawrence J. Ulm, co-ordinator, Volunteers in Corrections, Missouri Association for Social Welfare, pointed out that until citizens actively participate in the criminal justice system, "little progress can be expected." In becoming a volunteer probation and parole officer, a citizen is asked to donate an hour a week in counseling with young adult offenders.

According to Glen Duckworth, district supervisor of probation and parole, "Many of these young men and women are first offenders. We have two kinds of offenders, those who commit crimes against persons and those who commit crimes against property. We are aiming our program at the nonviolent, young offender who needs a friend."

Melvin Glueck, chairman of the Prison Concern Committee, Knights of Columbus, spoke of the drop in the recidivism rate among young offenders who has a volunteer assisting him in the community. "That alone," said Glueck, "should be reason enough to get involved."

James Crenshaw, a Sikeston attorney and himself a volunteer, related how he has helped a young man assigned to him obtain a driver's license and re-enroll in school. He is also helping to seek employment for the offender. "It has been a very satisfying experience for me," said Crenshaw.

The Volunteers in Corrections program is seeking mature, friendly individuals to become an inspiring individual for some of the areas 600 probationers or parolees. Volunteers are screened, trained, matched and supervised by probation personnel.

If you are interested in learning more about this program, contact the Missouri Association for Social Welfare, 113 B West High St., Jefferson City, Mo. 65101, phone (314) 636-4129 or the District 14 Probation Office, 210 West Stoddard Ave., Dexter, Mo. 63841, phone (314) 624-3528.

Marshall, Beitel vows exchanged on June 23

Miss Mary Elizabeth Marshall and Ronald Jay Beitel were united in marriage at a candlelight ceremony June 23 at St. Francis' Xavier Church. Monsignor Walter J. McGrane of Joplin officiated at the double - ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Marshall III of Blodgett. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Ben F. Marshall Jr. of Blodgett and the late Ben F. Marshall Jr., and Mrs. Ralph Frazer Anderson of Sikeston and the late Ralph F. Anderson. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Warren L. Beitel of Rock Springs, Wyo.

The wedding vows were exchanged in a setting of urns of white stock and baskets of white daisies with candelabra holding tall white cathedral candles. White candles and large white satin bows with pastel centers marked the bridal aisle.

Pre-nuptial music was provided by Mrs. J. E. Childress. Mrs. John Burke Marshall of Ste. Genevieve, aunt of the bride, sang, "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer", accompanied by Mrs. Childress.

The bride was escorted down the white- carpeted aisle by her father. She chose a formal gown of white satapeau and silk floss lace trim. A large lace motif centered with a ribbon bow accented the front bodice. A band of lace, traced with a self- fabric ruffle,, encircled the high neckline and wrists of the long fitted sleeves.

Lace motifs also adorned the lower portion of the A-line silhouette skirt and the center of the attached chapel length train. Matching lace encircled the waistline and bordered the hemline of the gown and train. Traditional bridal buttons were used on the cuffs and back closing of the gown.

Her three- tiered bouffant veil of imported illusion was held secure with a bonnet style cap, overlaid with embroidered lace, interwoven with white satin ribbon, and trimmed with pearls. Satin ribbon bows adorned the cap on each side. She carried a white lace handkerchief and a nosegay of white roses and baby's breath.

Miss Sally Marshall was her sister's maid of honor and bridesmaids were a sister, Miss Ellen Marshall, and Miss Tina Klein and Miss Carla Colwick. They wore identical gowns of aqua featuring an overdress of organza with long fitted sleeves and a slightly gathered skirt. The gowns were trimmed with matching ribbon at the waist, neck and wrists, and a Dior bow centered the waist in the back. The attendants carried nosegays of daisies and baby's breath with pastel streamers, each carrying a nosegay of a different color. They wore matching daisies in their hair.

The groom chose James Robbins of New Madrid as best man. The groomsmen were Franklin Marshall of Blodgett, Jerry Robbins of New Madrid, and Terry Beitel of Rock Springs, Wyoming. Ushers were Jim Marshall, Bob Walker, Ricky Nowell of New Madrid and Gary Beitel of Rock Springs.

Mrs. Beitel, the groom's mother, wore a pink crepe gown with white accessories. Both mothers wore orchid corsages.

A reception followed the ceremony at Sikeston Country Club. Presiding at the guest boook were Miss Sandy Swecker of Collinsville, Ill., and Miss Robin Hulsey of Creve Coeur. Organ selections were provided by Joel Allen. Serving the guests were Miss Julie Harbin, Miss Beverly Barnes, Miss Patti Dye, and Miss Ann Marshall. Miss Florence Marshall distributed rice bags to the guests.

The couple left for a brief wedding trip and now lives in Fulton.

A rehearsal dinner was given at Ramada Inn on Friday evening, hosted by the brides aunts and uncles, Mr. and Mrs. Tom A. Marshall of Sikeston and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Marshall of Ste. Genevieve.

A surprise kitchen shower was given by Miss Julie Harbin and Miss Tina Klein at the Harbin Home May 29.

A miscellaneous shower was given June 4 at the Blodgett Community Center by Mrs. Claude Deason, Mrs. Tommy Evans, Mrs. Billy Martin, Mrs. Jim Johnson, Mrs. Larry Cooper, Mrs. Bill Dodson and Mrs. Charles Stubbs.

Mrs. Harold Cope and Mrs. Robert Graham were hostesses at a bridal shower at the home of Mrs. Cope June 9.

On June 13, Mrs. William Northington, Mrs. E. L. Tongate and daughter Dee Ann Tongate entertained with a luncheon at Ramada Inn for the bride's attendants and mothers and relatives of the bride.

Mrs. George Doyle was hostess at a luncheon at her home June 14 honoring the bride.

Miss Courtney becomes first girl cadet

JEFFERSON CITY' Mo. (AP) — Sherry Ann Courtney, 16, a 5- foot- 2 brunette from Florissant, finished a one- week American Legion course Friday at the Missouri Highway Patrol Academy.

Miss Courtney, the first girl to go through the program since it was started three years ago, joined 78 boys of high school age in calistenics and target shooting.

The course is patterned after the six-month highway patrol training academy course.

"We don't expect all of these kids to be highway patrolmen," said Ed Johnson, state adjutant for the American Legion. "We hope that they can go back to their schools and help interpret the role of law enforcement personnel."

The youngsters are nominated for the program by the 17 American Legion districts in the state. The membership for the course is restricted to 80 youngsters.

The course was designed mainly for boys and there was some reluctance toward accepting Miss Courtney, Johnson said.

The youngsters are housed for one week at the patrol academy and have to awake at 5:45 a.m. At the end of the course, they get to keep their uniforms.

Miss Courtney "did everything the boys did," Johnson said, including 20 pushups at a time.

An ice- cold watermelon makes a tasty dessert for a back yard supper or barbecue. Cut a narrow lengthwise slice from the melon and scoop out the fruit. Combine the melon with a small can of cling peach slices, a couple sliced bananas and a small can of apricot halves. Drain fruits and return to melon bowl to serve.

A cup each of mayonnaise, whipped cream and crushed fresh strawberries with the juice of a lemon and 1 teaspoon confectioners' sugar is a perfect dressing for a summer salad. It's particularly good on canned cling peach halves, fresh pineapple spears and cantaloupe wedges.

Cathy Tate and R. Barger to wed

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Tate of Cash, Ark., announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter Cathy Ann to Michael Roy Barger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Barger of Sikeston.

Miss Tate is a 1973 graduate of West Side High School in Cash and is employed at Mercantile Bank in Jonesboro, Ark.

Barger attended Sikeston public schools until 1968 when he moved to Gonzales, La., where he graduated from East Ascension High School in 1969. He is employed by ADT Security Systems in Jonesboro.

The couple plans an 8 p.m. wedding on July 14 at Earnest Chapel Assembly of God Church in Cash.

THE RYATTS by Jack Elrod

BEETLE BAILEY by Mort Walker

Undersea war we wage

Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. — Airborne electronic "eyes" flashed word here from northwest of Honolulu last April that a near 400- foot-long Russian submarine had surfaced amidst one of the most highly- guarded ocean areas on earth.

Swooping over, Navy tracker planes identified her as a Yankee- class ship carrying 16 ballistic missiles — the equal of our Polaris nuclear subs.

"We were sort of taken aback," says Deputy Commander, Capt. Edward E. Williams of Anti- Submarine Warfare Forces, Pacific. "We knew of a heavy Russian subsea presence in the eastern Pacific. But this was the first confirmation of a 'Y' class big boy so far from home base."

Modified Soviet prowlers of this type are believed capable of lofting nuclear missiles from Hawaii to California, and beyond— some 3,000 miles.

Pressure of an undeclared global undersea war is pushing subs of the USSR Pacific Fleet closer and closer to California waters.

The move is regarded here as critical.

"They're within range of Los Angeles City Hall," say strategists under Vice Admiral Evan P.Aurand, the top submarine boss in these parts. "And close enough to hit Vandenberg Missile Base, ICBM sites at Chico and elsewhere and military bases at San Diego, Riverside and elsewhere."

Aurand and U.S. First Fleet Commander Vice Adm. Raymond E. Peet liken it to "having a many chambered gun pointed at your head in your own back yard."

Invasion of sea space which the Navy cannot affort to yield is a relatively new move by the Soviets.

And it's been a quiet, methodical, growing one.

An unknown number of Russia's estimated 92 nuclear-powered subs of both the cruise- missile and attack type now move in regularly from home bases at Vladivostok and the Kamchatka Peninsula to study eastern Pacific approaches and — reportedly — sow it with factfinding electronic "bugs."

While most attention has been on the Mediterranean, the Atlantic and Cuba, a buildup threatening to West Coast cities and installations has developed."Every inch of California coast, and more, is vulnerable," say Hawaiian experts.

Nowadays the Russians are estimated to have 20 times more undersea boats in their Pacific detachment than Hitler had at the outset of World War II.

Word at Ford Island is that one USSR submarine yard, alone — Severodvinsk on the White Sea — has a greater building capacity than all U.S. sub yards combined.

"Kremlin cigars" are a big part of the fastest naval boom in history. Last January, President Nixon advised the Defense Department to prepare a $15 billion sub and anti- sub system as a key deterrent against nuclear attack through the 1980s. The total USSR submarine strength is 355, compared to 142 for the United States.

Outmatched in numbers, we also lack guided (cruise) missile submarines, of which Russia has a reported 65. These vessels can stand off 300 to 400 miles and hit surface ships beyond their range of retaliation.

Big, $1- billion- each carriers such as the Eisenhower, Nimitz and Kennedy continue to roll down our shipways, but the sub program lags.

This discomfits commanders here and adds to the difficulty of their job — that of setting up defenses.

Visitors here quickly learn now intently the threat to the Pacific Coast is being met.

More than 12,000 men and the most advanced of electronic inventions are employed between the First Fleet out of San Diego, Long Beach and Hawaii and the Seventh Fleet, based at Yokosuka, Japan. Hawaii is a strategic point as the Russians show more and more curiosity about our off- continental defenses.

The first thing one notices at Pearl Harbor is a captured, two- man Japanese sub — a "human torpedo" — which was used to attack Pearl in the raid of December 1941. The attacking force sneaked at least a dozen of these into the harbor as a prelude to the aerial bombardment.

The displayed, 54- foot-long object is there as a reminder that in any future, electonized war, submarines will play the vital role.

Basic to everything going on today in the Pacific is antisubmarine warfare (ASW) — the core of which is the ability to peer into the practically opaque, sound-crammed ocean and detect the presence of an invading ship. "Detection is everything," points out Adm. Aurand. "You may produce the best ASW weapon in the world, but until we find the enemy sub it's useless."

When our undersea patrols leave here or San Diego, they carry a fantastic device called the magnetic anomaly detector. This device spies out obstructions or anomalies in the earth's magnetic field precisely enough to say whether it's a whale, a mass of plankton — or a nuclear or conventional submarine. "It can even tell us by comparing a signal against a known sub's magnetic profile what class of sub it is," says the ASW command. "It can go further — predict the next contact of the ship, its course and speed."

The U.S. now is fitting the advanced, 3,000- mile- range Poseidon nuclear missile into 31 of our 41 ballistic subs. Protecting the West Coast from Mexico to Canada are 23 "Flotilla One" subs — 10 of them nuke- powered attack vessels. They can stay underwater indefinitely, using rotating "Blue" and "Gold" crews. Their target accuracy is 99 percent.

Included in off- California service is the $85 million USS Dolphin, the world's deepest-diving sub and unique in the Navy. Last Jan. 8 the keel was laid for the USS Los Angeles, which is designed to be the quietest- running nuke sub the world has known. She'll be in duty by early 1973.

"Poseidon missiles will be our important new deterrent weapon," explains Capt. Ed Williams. "They'll be outfitted with multiple warheads, each of which can be separately targeted." This is the "ultimate weapon" — MIRV (multiple Independently Targetable Reentry Vehicles). Once fired, MIRV splits off into a number of missiles — each with an objective and flying too fast to be shot down."

"Assuming the Russians have MIRV capability, too," ASW chiefs remind you, "it's our job to be able to destroy any undersea attack before it can be triggered."

Unspoken but a terrible fact is that a multi- megaton missile launched underwater from a submarine is next to impossible to stop. Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles must travel many miles. From a sub, it's only a pop- shot to land.

Only five months ago, a Soviet convoy of seven warships insolently steamed into off- limits Hawaiian waters, passing between Maui and the Big Island of Hawaii. Included were two subs of the attack type. In refueling 20 miles off Diamond Head, the prowlers discharged oil into the sea.

"We had a big hue and cry about pollution," says Adm. Peet's office. "As far as we were concerned, this wasn't the point. The point was that subs, destroyers and supply ships of their Navy could function this far from base and even loiter for several days on the local scene. They showed us great range."

How effective is our detection? "We knew all about them five weeks before they got here," goes on the report. "We'd tracked them closely from off the Siberian coast and never lost contact."

On the other hand, the admirals claim that Soviet antisubmarine forces have never yet detected an American missile sub on patrol.

Operating from California bases and Hawaii is another system of locating invaders far from the West Coast. Soviet subs enter the Pacific from the Indian Ocean through the Strait of Malacca between the Malay Peninsula and Sumatra and through the Japanese Strait between Korea and Japan. These are the subhunter tracker- killer aircraft, chiefly the Grumman S-2 Tracker and the Lockheed P3-C Orion.

"For example, let's say that in wartime an enemy sub is operating in the upper eastern Pacific," says Capt. Williams "How do we pin him down and wipe him out?"

The current answer is a combination of speedy little S-2's equipped with sonobuoy launchers and a flying data-processor plane which carries more electronic gear than any aircraft in the world. These, along with helicopters.

Initially, the trackers send sound buoys plunging deep into the sea, weaving a wide pattern from which a sub, no matter how evasive, cannot escape. Computers absorb the findings of the sonobuoys, indicating the point of attack.

Next comes either the 400-knot PC-3, equipped with another 52 launchers for sonobuoys, a MAD (magnetic anomaly detetor), system digital target computers and a variety of weapons — air- to-surface missiles, depth bombs, torpedoes, rockets and mines.

"The PC-3 is the most highly computerized submarine killer in the air today," states Adm. Bernard Cleary, commander- in- chief Pacific Fleet. Her internal systems can handle four million bits of data per minute.

Prayer for today

from the Upper Room

Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. [Mark 8:34]

PRAYER: Lord, we thank Thee for the cross of Christ that made our salvation possible. As we accept redemption through Him, help us to accept whatever cross we must bear as the cost of our discipleship. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB
Calories Remain, Though

Making Pancakes Without Eggs

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — In your column about breakfast you stated, "I would recommend pancakes (which can be made without eggs or added fat)." My daughter has a gall bladder condition which prohibits yolks of eggs and all animal and vegetable fats and she likes pancakes so I would appreciate it if you would send me the recipe for pancakes without eggs or fats.

My daughter has a defective thyroid and is considerably overweight, so the internist who examined her prescribed medication and a diet.

Dear Reader — You can use most commercial pancake mixes or almost any standard recipe, just disregard the directions to add an egg or to add shortening or oil. They will turn out fine.

The next question then is what to put on the pancakes. If you are trying to avoid fat intake you can use non-fat dry milk powder. Mix it extra rich until it's thick enough to pass for cream. To this you can add sugar to taste and cinnamon if you like, for a spread on top of the pancakes. This way you can serve pancakes which contain almost no fat. This does not mean that they won't have calories. If your daughter needs to lose weight, pancakes of any type may not be the best idea.

Dear Dr. Lamb — In one of your columns you commented "low blood sugar and many other problems— are often related to living habits, particularly diet, and can frequently be corrected." This seems to imply that hypoglycemia is reversible. I was under the impression that it was the reverse of diabetes, and not correctable or reversible.

Can you give me some suggestions on correct living habits and diet to correct low blood sugar condition?

Dear Reader — The common low blood sugar problems are reversible. They are not at all the opposite of diabetes. The only analogy you can draw here is that in low blood sugar there is a low blood glucose level, whereas in untreated diabetes the blood glucose level is high. The mechanisms involved are quite different.

There are many causes for low blood sugar, including a tumor of the pancreas, involving the tissues that produce insulin. This rare form of low blood sugar might really be considered as the opposite of diabetes. It can be cured by removing the tumor. Most people who have low blood sugar do not have a tumor of the pancreas but have a functional problem related to eating too many sweets.

The most satisfactory diet approach is to eliminate sweets, desserts, starches and shift the emphasis to fresh vegetables, foods with bulk and foods rich in protein. The latter category obviously includes the meats, fish and poultry. Drinks such as hot coffee containing sugar, or sweetened soft drinks are a real no-no. So are sweet starchy foods. For breakfast these individuals should eat fish, such as salmon patties, or broiled or fried fish or meat. With a hot breakfast cereal like hot oatmeal one can use margarine or butter without adding any sweetening. If cereals are used, some individuals may do all right using a small amount of artificial sweetener. But the main emphasis should be on bulk foods relatively low in sweets and a bigger emphasis on protein-type foods.

State board approves vocational programs

Programs designed to provide more young Missourians with career-vocational training and to give "migrant" children a better education were approved by the State Board of Education at its June meeting.

The board of education also approved a program designed to help school districts develop innovative solutions to their local educational problems; a program to continue the federal driver and safety education programs on a statewide basis; and a new contract with the Veterans Administration to provide educational services to Missouri veterans.

All of these projects are for continuation during the coming school year.

It's expected that the career- vocational programs will continue to attract the interest of more and more young people. During the coming year, It's estimated that 178,000 Missourians will enroll in vocational programs, an increase of about 7,500 from this year. Approximately 66 per cent of these will be high school age.

The state vocational plan also calls for the construction or expansion of four area vocational schools.

Construction of new area schools will begin this year at Boonville and Mountain Grove. Schools at Raytown and for the Special School District of St. Louis County will be expanded. Hopefully, most of this construction will be completed by the Fall of 1974.

The program for migratory children is designed to accommodate about 3,500 youngsters, most of whom are the children of migratory agricultural workers. In Missouri, about 90 per cent of these children are located in the Bootheel area.

The migratory project, estimated to cost about $427,000, is a special federally-funded program under Title I, ESEA. In approving the program, the State Board of Education also approved the application for this federal money.

Missouri's plan for migratory children is operated primarily under the auspices of the Educational Service and Record Center at Southeast Missouri State University, Cape Girardeau.

The Center not only provides funds for the local school districts which educate the children, but also provides special assistances with teachers, social workers and with special educational materials and equipment.

Forty- eight school districts will receive direct financial assistance under the Title III, ESEA program to develop innovative and exemplary solutions to their educational problems.

Under this plan, the districts submit educational projects to the State Department of Education for evaluation and approval on an open competition basis. Last year, 31 programs were funded. It's expected that the Title III, ESEA program will cost about $2,400,000 during the coming year.

The driver and safety education program is conducted in cooperation with the Missouri Division of Highway Safety. Federally funded, the program is expected to cost about $300,000. This coming year's program includes seven major tasks, including teacher training and in- service programs, curriculum development, school bus driver training and the purchase of simulation equipment.

What's the law?

The case of the hapless depositor

By jack Strauss, LL.B.

When it came to money, Helen was as careful as a ticklish girl at a stag party. Consequently, when she made a large deposit at a bank, whe kept one steady eye on the teller and the other on her moola. What she failed to see, however, was a blind man who got in line behind her. Nor did she observe his seeing-eye dog reposing gently at his side.

The result? When Helen turned to walk away from the teller's cage, she tripped on the dog's leash and landed on the floor of the bank next to the somewhat puzzled canine.

Suffering a broken arm in the mishap, Helen was bent on suing the bank for damages.

"Having admitted a seeing-eye dog onto its premises," complained Helen in court, "the bank had a duty to make sure no one fell over its leash. After all, the blind man was in no position to warn anyone of the danger and the dog, obviously, didn't give a '"Woof Woof."'

"Nonsense," responded a bank official. "If anyone was at fault, it was Helen herself. After all, the dog didn't trip over her; she tripped over the dog. Instead of watching her money so intently, she should have been watching her step."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the bank pay its hapless depositor for her injury?

Thsi is how the judge rules: NO! The judge held that responsibility for negligence is based upon a risk that is foreseeable and which can be anticipated. Every possible accident due to and unusual and an unforeseeable combination of circumstances is not included. Reasonable foresight is required, not prophetic visiton.

In this case, concluded the judge, it was not foreseeable that a woman would trip over the leash of a seeing-eye dog lying quietly next to his owner.

Tribute to Photographer Edward Steichen on "Camera Three" July 1

A tribute to one of the world's great photographers is presented in "A Remembrance of Edward Steichen" on "Camera Three" Sunday, July 1 10:00 - 10:30 AM,) on the CBS Television Network. Steichen died this year at 93, a master of fashion, still-life, portrait, commercial and war photography, with various outstanding achievements behind him that he modestly termed "apprenticeships."

This film portrait, made when Steichen was 86, captures the photographer in remembrances of his life and artistic loves. At one time the foremost fashion photographer in New York, Steichen turned to portrait, commercial and still-life photography, excelling at all.

"The photographer establishes an intimate relationship between himself and what he is photographing, whether it's a can of beans or Greta Garbo," he once said.

He saw action in both world wars, with his major focus , as always, on nature and man. "Concentrate on the faces," he told his assistants. "The sips and planes will become obsolete, but not the faces."

The definitive statement of Steichen's artistic philosophy was "The Family of Man," a huge photographic exhibit he collected from around the world for the Museum of Modern Art --completed when he was 76.

This film was written by Jane Kramer and narrated by David Wayne. Merrill Brockway is the executive producer of "Camera Three" for WCBS-TV, CBS Owned station in New York.

NO BATTERY HEARING AID

COST OF BATTERIES- GOING HIGHER AND HIGHER- NO END IN SIGHT.

(ST. LOUIS SPECIAL). An all new hearing aid that eliminates normal changing of batteries has been developed and is saving money for hearing aid users throughout the country. The hearing aid is moderate in price, yet superior to other much higher priced instruments. The nickel cadium power cell eliminates changing batteries and does away with background noise and hum in the amplifier. The automatic suppression circuit controls those too loud noises, helps your hearing and understanding in church, noisy restaurants, in traffic and crowds. Ehrlichman claims proof Dean lied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman says he has evidence to "trip up" the sworn testimony of John Dean III.

Ehrlichman said he believes Dean is trying to implicate President Nixon to save himself from criminal prosecution.

"The only person who would have been in a position to keep abreast of an investigation and to have taken steps to protect the three or four people, including himself, who were involved in the inception of this thing, was Dean," Ehrlichman said.

The former presidential counsel "was uniquely at the pivot point of the cover-up," said Ehrlichman in the strongest counterattack to date against Dean.

Ehrlichman's statements came in an interview with the Christian Science Monitor as Dean concluded Friday five days of exhaustive testimony and stood firm on his charge that President Nixon knew the outlines of the cover-up as early as last Sept. 15.

Dean said Ehrlichman and former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman shared that knowledge with the President.

Ehrlichman said in a CBS television interview he first became aware a cover-up was in progress last March after he had begun an investigation at the request of the President.

"Dean will be tripped up by the logs I kept of all meetings," the Christian Science Monitor quoted Ehrlichman as saying.

In the television interview Ehrlichman acknowledged he had responsibility for the White House team investigating leaks of national security information. But he claimed he had no advance knowledge that the team planned the 1971 burglary of the office of the psychiatrist of Pentagon papers figure Daniel Ellsberg.

Ehrlichman appeared on CBS program "60 Minutes" and was interviewed by correspondent Mike Wallace in a session taped Thursday.

Dean admitted to Senate questioners that he was heavily involved in the coverup. But he said he was acting on the orders of Haldeman and Ehrlichman. In his testimony Dean also disclosed that the White House maintained a list of the President's political enemies and that pressure was put on him to come up with a plan to harrass them through tax audits, investigations and other steps.

Dean said Ehrlichman knew of the enemies list. Ehrlichman said, "That's something that was developed totally outside of my sight and hearing."

Senate testimony established that FBI logs of wiretaps on government employes and newsmen ended up in Ehrlichman's White House safe but he said he never authorized or ordered the wiretapping of newsmen's telephones.

Dean testified repeatedly that he had never been told to investigate the possible involvement of White House aides in the Watergate break-in and had never done so.

Ehrlichman said in the Christian Science Monitor interview that Dean told Nixon, Haldeman and himself that "a very vigorous and intensive investigation had not produced any evidence to implicate anyone except the seven men indicted in the break-in.

In other developments, former Attorney General John Mitchell's attorney said his client definitely has no information implicating the President in the cover-up.

Dean's claim that President Nixon knew of the coverup caused Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., ranking Republican on the Senate committee, to urge the President to find some way to submit a response under oath.

Baker acknowledged any such steps might involve a clash with the doctrine of the separation of powers. A White House spokesman indicated such a move was unlikely.

Special prosecutor Archibald Cox made it known that he has received differing opinions from his staff on whether Nixon or any president could be subpoenaed before a grand jury to testify or indicted and tried.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., a member of the Watergate committee, ordered former White House aide Charles W. Colson to leave his office after Colson admitted he wrote a memo suggesting a tax audit on the returns of Harold J. Gibbons, until recently a vice president of the Teamsters Union in St. Louis, Mo.

The memo described Gibbons as ardently anti-Nixon and "an all out enemy."

8 hurt in 5 accidents

Five traffic accidents on area roads Friday resulted in eight injuries, the highway patrol reported today.

Ricky Akridge, 16, of Catron was injured at 10:30 p.m. on Route D in Lilbourn when he lost control of his car on a curve, ran off the road and struck a telephone pole.

Akridge received a nose cut and a passenger, Judy Lawson, 16, also of Catron, suffered body cuts. Akridge was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital and Miss Lawson was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

Lawrence Morgan, 55, of Cairo, Ill., was injured at 6:35 p.m. at the junction of Highways 61 and 164 at Steele when a car driven west by B. Moore, 69, of Steele pulled into the intersection and struck the Morgan car in the side.

Morgan was taken to Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti.

At 10:35 a.m. on Route Y two miles south of Caruthersville, the driver of a tractor was injured when the tractor was struck from behind by a pickup truck driven by Samuel Mills, 90, of Hornersville.

The tractor driver, Michael Leathers, 18, of Rives, received cuts on the forearm and was taken to a clinic in Hornersville.

Carol Sue Seiler, 13, of Oak Ridge was injured at 4:45 p.m. on Route E one and one-half miles west of Oak Ridge when her bicycle was struck.

The accident occurred when a pickup driven by Arthur Smith, 31, of Friedheim, came over a hill upon six bicycle riders. Smith swerved his truck to the right to avoid the riders and struck the Sieler bicycle as it left the road.

Miss Seiler received head injuries and was taken to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Three persons were injured at 1:50 p.m. in a head-on collision two miles east of Wyatt on Highway60 when a car driven by Joseph Case, 58, of Cecilia, Ky., came upon a car stopped in the road. Case swerved into the left lane and collided with a car driven by Rosie Harris, 52, of Chicago, Ill.

Injured were Helen Johnson, 68, and Julia Love, 70, of Chicago, who suffered leg injuries, and Terry Morrison, 23, of Chicago, who received a back injury. All three were passengers in the Harris vehicle. They were taken to St. Mary's Hospital in Cairo, Ill.

Rice gets 5 years

JACKSON— Charles Rice, 31, of Wyatt, was found guilty Friday of firing a gun at Sikeston police officer Jesse Redd on July 27, 1972 at 329 Luther Street.

Cape Girardeau County Circuit Court Judge Stan Grimm assessed punishment at five years in the state penitentiary. The jury deliberated 40 minutes before reaching the verdict.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Jim Moore had previously filed a motion, approved by the court, which tried Rice under the second offender act. The motion took the question of fixing punishment away from the jury and placed it in the hands of the judge.

Moore said the motion was filed because Rice had a previous felony conviction and because juries tend to be lenient in fixing punishment. Judge Grimm gave Rice the maximum punishment allowed.

Scott County Magistrate Court Judge Lloyd Briggs was disqualified by Rice at the preliminary level and Judge Jerry Estes of Cape Girardeau was also disqualified. Rice tried to disqualify Judge Koss Blomeyer of Stoddard County, but he had used up his alloted disqualifications. Rice asked that all three judges take mental exams, but was refused.

He was bound over to Scott County Circuit Court following his preliminary hearing on March 26, of this year.

On April 12 his request that Judge Marshall Craig undergo mental examination was not allowed to be filed and his motion to dismiss his court appointed attorney was overruled.

His motion to dismiss Judge Craig and change his venue was upheld and his case was moved to Cape Girardeau County for trial.

Johnson faces theft charges

CHARLESTON — Charges of burglary and stealing were filed Friday afternoon against Paul Johnson, 27, and Rufus "Pop" Armstrong, 34, of Charleston, according to Deputy Sheriff Mike Baughman.

The two men are accused of breaking into a house at 306 Brooklyn St. in Charleston, owned by Shiloh Baptist Church, Wednesday and stealing a 60,000 BTU gas heater, couch and chair.

Bond has been set at $2,500 each and the pair is scheduled to appear before Magistrate T. J. Brown Thursday.

Greer jailed on weapon charge

CHARLESTON — James Napolean Greer, 24, of Wyatt, arrested Friday night by Wyatt Marshal John Pearson, is being held in Mississippi County jail on a charge of exhibiting and flourishing a dangerous and deadly weapon.

Deputy Sheriff Mike Baughman said today Greer reportedly went to the home of Mary Sloan at the corner of Gum and Second streets in Wyatt sometime Friday night inquiring about a girl. When Mrs. Sloan did not tell him where the girl was, he alledgedly went to his car, returned with a shotgun and threatened her.

Bond for Greer, who is scheduled to appear in Magistrate Court Thursday, has been set at $1,000.

Speakman to join police

Edward Speakman of St. Louis, a former Sikeston resident, will join the Sikeston Police Department as a patrolman on July 23, City Manager Jim Huff announced today.

Speakman has been working for the St. Louis County Police Department for three years and has 600 hours of study in the St. Louis police academy.

He is married and a graduate of Sikeston high school

Robbery suspect jailed

POPLAR BLUFF — Leonard Charles Hill of Malden is being held in Butler County Jail for investigation of an armed robbery about noon Friday at E. C. Robinson Lumber Co.

Hill was apprehended Friday night in Malden by the city police, highway patrol and Dunklin County sheriff's department.

According to the patrol, the robbery was committed by two black men, who held up Charlie Dees an employe of the lumber company, taking $200 and three guns.

The other man being sought is about 25 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs about 180 pounds.

Agencies seeking summer help

By JEANNE MAYNARD

It's summertime and the living is easy, but if you are young, able- bodied and excited about living, you're probably not content with simply lying around the house getting soft just because you haven't been able to find a paying summer job between school terms.

But wait. All is not lost. If you've got the time, we've got the place. Your summer can be filled with fun and excitement. All you have to do is apply that resource you find so heavy on your hands— time— to one of the many volunteer agencies around town in need of your services.

So, what's in it for you? Plenty. The self-satisfying feeling you get only by knowing that you are needed; the lump you get in your throat when you discover that people actually listen to your worthwhile ideas, and at the end of it all, the surprising realization that you have grown without the help of vitamins or hormones. . . in character.

For the future nurses in the crowd, or anybody else who has an eye on a career in the medical profession, don't overlook the opportunity to get a sneak preview of things to come by volunteering your good cheer as a Candy Striper at Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

While caring for the sick, you will be gaining practical experience and learning more about the many job opportunities available in the life- saving business. For more details, contact Mrs. David Croom at 667- 5918.

Along the same line, for young people interested in specialized work, the Sikeston Regional Diagnostic Clinic is interested in volunteer assistance on an individual basis with craft projects, recreation, taking children on short walks, and even letter writing. Sports- minded fellows are badly needed to help organize weekend ball games.

If you can be available between 7 and 9 p.m. during the week and anytime on the weekend, contact Judith Lopp, director of nursing at the clinic by phone at 471- 9455.

If handicrafts are "your thing", the Easter Seal Home Craft Shop is the place to be. Dolls, glasswork, stuffed animals, woodworking projects purses and similar crafts must be assembled into kits for the handicapped to construct. A world of materials are available for you to mix and match. Express yourself. Phone 472- 0663 for more details.

Experience is a valuable asset for college students planning a professional teaching career and it isn't always easy to find. Right? Stop the search, and hurry on over to the Sikeston Public School System, which is conducting a summer session; and you can help. The academic- minded may act as a teacher's aide in the classroom. Recreation assistants are needed on the playground, and help is needed in the cafeteria. You might even get a free cookie. To establish the hours, you can come between 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Contact Miss Harriet Jones at 471-3248.

If you can devote just six hours, in one-hour sessions to teach eager 4- H'ers a skill, Mrs. Peter Myers, 4- H club leader, would like to talk to you. Club members would like to know more about photography, electricity, clothing construction, gardening, flower growing and arranging, food and nutrition, automotive construction, small engine construction, consumer education and public speaking. Interested? Call 471-3248.

Volunteerism has long been the basis for the Girl Scout organization, and you'll never be too old to help. The Sikeston Cadettes could use some transportation to Branson Aug. 14- 17 where they will visit Silver Dollar City. Assistant leaders and recreation volunteers are also needed. If you can devote any time or energy, call 471- 1035 or write Cotton Boll Council, P.O. Box 336, Sikeston.

There's a world out there which needs you. Share a little of yourself, and watch those idle moments turn into a summer full of rewarding smiles.

We think the rain is caused by the jets, we also think that one of the reasons why our money in foreign countries is not worth anything since they have plenty of paper of their own, and since we don't have any silver backing us or any gold backing our money. No wonder that the other countries are buying gold. We wonder if Russia pays us in dollars or in gold. If they can buy the dollars so damn much cheaper than they can buy gold, I expect them to pay for the wheat, but some of the boys at the coffee shop tell me that Russia is buying it on credit, that we are not getting any money for the wheat. I don't know, I have never seen any place in the paper where it says Russia is buying on credit, neither have I seen any place in the paper where they said Russia was paying us in dollars or paying us in gold. While we don't own any wheat, we do feel sorry for the wheat farmer that have sold their wheat and hope that a new price rise is on the new crop to where they can make a little money.

Speaking of inflation, in more ways than one, they recently raised an ancient covered bridge across the Housantonic river in Connecticut to protect it from rising water levels.

Cost of the project was $556,000, which was probably not bad for the four- month- long job of levering the bridge off its original foundations and inserting two- foot- thick slabs at either end.

The interesting thing is that the bridge is believed to have cost a mere $900 when it was built back in 1802.

'FEDERAL SPENDING CLOCK'

For the first time in history, the rate the government spends money is being clocked, literally, by a "Federal Spending Clock" located in the national headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Every 1.2 seconds a dial indicates the expenditure of another $10,000, the average annual income of an American family. Every 12.6 seconds a light flashes, indicating the spending of another $100,000. And every two minutes and six seconds, a "beep" is heard, signaling that the federal government has just dropped another million smackeroos.

The "beep," incidentally, goes off about 700 times a day. By the end of the current fiscal year, the rapidly changing digital figures on top of the clock will have registered a total of some $250 billion.

Meanwhile, over at the Census Bureau, there's another clock that records the arrival every few seconds of one more citizen who will spend most of his lifetime making the other clock run.

While scanning through Catholic Quote the other day, we were impressed by an item written by Harold Blake Walker. Here it is:

"In my boyhood I was constantly reminded that there were standards of conduct to which I owed obedience.

"Courtesy and consideration for others were required of gentlemen.

"Honesty and good manners were by no means optional.

"Respect for the property of others was mandatory, and if a misdirected baseball punctured a neighbor's window, I paid for the window the hard way.

"What is more, the standards of conduct and manners were generally accepted. There was a consensus concerning right and wrong.

"I have an uneasy feeling that in matters of deportment we have slipped.

"Teenage riots, disrespect for teachers in the public schools, student disorder on college campuses, and violence on our city streets suggest that the standards of conduct once regarded as required have become more or less optional.

"Nevertheless, in a free society, standards of deportment are required, not optional."

I happened to be browsing through one of my favorite books the other night; it was "Six Crises," by Richard M. Nixon, one of my favorite authors.

There's a passage, in it, on page 408 to be exact, in which he is recounting a conversation he had with Jack Kennedy shortly after the 1960 election but before Kennedy had taken office. Mr. Nixon writes of the occasion:

"He asked for my opinion of the career people in CIA, USIA, and the State Department. I told him very candidly the conviction I had reached after my very first trip abroad in 1953, and from which I had not deviated — that our careerists in these agencies are for the most part devoted, loyal, and efficient public servants.

"But many times they lack imagination, or are fearful of using it. All too often they are more concerned with keeping a good job than with doing one. I made two recommendations.

"As far as CIA was concerned, I felt that its assignment was presently too broad. It should continue to have primary responsibility for gathering and evaluating intelligence, in which it was doing a good job.

"But I said it had been my plan, had I been elected, to set up a new and independent organization for carrying out covert para-military operations."

That's what the man said. Maybe he should have called the book: "Mein Kampf."

Some tribesmen in New Guinea have offered to become cannibals again in order to put on a show at a local festival. They figured it would be a good gate attraction.

The government declined the offer.

It wasn't such an unusual idea, though. We do the same thing over here — only we call it the Watergate Hearings.

And speaking of that, the Wall Street Journal carried a story the other day on the demoralization that has overtaken the Justice Department in the wake of the Watergate disclosures.

Everybody wants to quit and feels as though he's been had, particularly by John Mitchell. One recently resigned official said:

"John Mitchell brought the morals of Wall Street to government."

That's a pretty stern indictment.

The things we bicyclists have to put up with, you wouldn't believe it.

The other day in Washington, D. C., they were holding a hearing on an alleged hit- and run of a bicyclist by a motorist.

During the course of the hearing the assistant corporation counsel for the district, a young man named Jeff Cooper, said:

"Unfortunately, bicycles are entitled to a lane in traffic. Every morning as I drive to work I feel like mowing them down like bowling pins. I don't understand why people ride bicycles when they could enjoy air conditioning and music in their cars."

He actually said that. We called him up and he admitted it.

Over the past year - and-a-half, riding my bicycle on the streets of Washington, I find a strange feeling coming over me.

It's called insanity.

The other day I found myself out in the middle of a busy street, nose- to -nose with a motorist whom I was on the verge of bashing in the mouth.

The week before I came within a hair of jumping into the front seat of an open convertible and thrashing the driver.

Last month I actually chased a Volkswagen a mile before I despaired of catching him so that I could throttle its master.

Why do I do these things? Why am I going crazy? Because they keep trying to kill me. They think I'm a bowling pin and they keep trying to mow me down.

Call me paranoid, if you will, but in the words of the poet Delmore Schwarts — "Even paranoids have enemies."

Let me ask you this, however. If it is so comfortable in those air conditioned cars with the Muzak flowing, why not sit back and relax and enjoy it? Why be in such a hurry to kill a bicyclist?

We may have to go to guerilla warfare, you know. So, watch it.

CRACKDOWN ON PORN

The extent to which the Burger Court has moved away from the permissiveness of the Warren Court is evidenced most clearly in the Supreme Court's 5 to 4 decision restricting hard core pornography.

In ruling that community standards rather than national standards may be used in determining whether material is obscene, the court has given state prosecutors a powerful new weapon to control printed and filmed filth. There's no question of the meaning of the court's decision, for Chief Justice Burger, in writing the majority opinion, noted that the court "agreed on concrete guidelines to isolate 'hard core' pornography from expression protected by the First Amendment."

The Supreme Court's decision is, therefore, a great victory for decency and for respect for the human personality.

It is interesting that only a few weeks ago there was published in this county a tremendously important and useful book entitled "The Case Against Pornography" (The Library Press, Box 509, La Salle, Ill. $8.95), edited by David Holbrook, a British educator.

In his introduction to this collection of essays on pornography, Mr. Holbrook observes that "our failure to discriminate against pornography marks a deep failure in our intellectual life." He pointed out that pornography is a "hideous debasement of the human image." Mr. Holbrook relates the acceptance of pornography to the nihilism revealed in the Nazi movement a generation ago, saying that "the same fanatical nihilism is abroad in the avant - garde and underground pornography, while the phenomenon of the 'sexual revolution' belongs to the same naturalism which led to Treblinka and Auschwitz. How did pornography become part of 'protest' and 'progressive politics'?"

Prof. Ernest van den Haag of New York University is author of one of the most illuminating essays in the book. He makes clear how actions are influenced by ideas and ideal models and relates pornography to gruesome crimes. In one passage, Dr. van den Haag, who specializes in psychiatric studies, says: "I believe that pornography nearly always leads to sadistic pornography. By definition, pornography deindividualizes and dehumanizes sexual acts; by eliminating all the contests it reduces people simply to bearers of impersonal sensations of pleasure and pain. The dehumanization eliminates the empathy that restrains us ultimately from sadism and non-consensual acts."

Dr. van den Haag doesn't hesitate to draw the local conclusion from his studies, asserting: "If we indulge pornography, and do not allow censorship to restrict it, our society at best will become ever more coarse, brutal, anxious, indifferent, deindividualized, hedonistic, at worst, its ethos will disintegrate altogether."

Dr. Irving Kristol, editor of The Public Interest, gives a similar analysis and reaches the same conclusions. He notes that "the way we use our minds and imaginations shape our characters and help define us as persons." He notes that, historically, society has restricted cruel and debasing spectacles. What is at stake in the issue of pornography, Dr. Kristol declares "is civilization and humanity, nothing less. The idea that 'everything is permitted' rests on the premise of nihilism and nihilistic implications." Dr. Kristol, like Prof. van den Haag, follows his ideas to their logical conclusion. "Lest there be any misunderstanding as to what I am saying, "I'll put it as bluntly as possible: if you care for the quality of life in our American democracy, then you have to be for censorship."

The majority of the U. S. Supreme Court apparently followed much of the same line of reasoning and displayed the same concern for civilized values and the dignity of the human being. Only people indifferent to the quality of human life can be dismayed at the Supreme Court's ruling against the dehumanizing influence of hard core pornography.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Law and Order Wins:

Old Line Democrat- Labor Alliance Revives;

Smashes Key New Politics Coalition Machine

NEW YORK— Standard equipment for any night spot comedian is a gag which runs: "A burly chap walks up to a tourist and asks the stranger if he knows where Central Park is. The visitor says no. The husky inquisitor says, "Good, then I'll mug you here.'"

Laughter. Bitter laughter. Uncomfortable patrons worry about getting home that evening.

This is a city under siege. There are few safe havens. Just lucky ones.

Posh Park Avenue and the tragic ghettos are seared with the insensate cruelty of the pusher, the thief, the hundreds of roving street gangs. The marauders are impartial. The police try, but sadism strikes in this teeming megalopolis against black and white, Puerto Rican, Jew and Gentile.

In my favorite Chinese restaurant this past Tuesday, primary election night, a maitre d' who recognized me came to the table. I hadn't seen him for some years. Why? He explained he had saved his money. He opened his own restaurant on the Grand Concourse, once quite seriously called the "Champs Elysees of the Bronx." Near a huge movie house built in the '30s.

Incessantly he was robbed. Constantly street gangs broke through the skylight at night. Continually they smashed the bottles at the bar. Wantonly. For kicks. Not for drinks. My Chinese friend held out nine months. He went broke. Now he is back at his old stand working for someone else.

And, just drive on the intra-city highways. On any clear day you can see autos which had broken down the night before and had to be left for morning. The dawn's light shows them stripped, just shells.

On Democratic mayoralty primary day, the people revolted. They regrouped in the old traditional big city majority. They defeated the "New Politics" Congressman Herman Badillo, who had boasted his constituency consisted of the black and Puerto Rican communities.

He had narrowed himself. He had seemingly abandoned his universality. He had said the Italian community didn't count in a primary. He likened himself to Tom Bradley, recently elected mayor of Los Angeles.

But Badillo for got that Bradley had been a police officer and had not narrowed his claim to the big city minorities.

No man can claim them. Badillo had raised the race issue. That cost him the nomination. He lost to the bantam comptroller Abe Beame, a traditional Rooseveltian Democrat. It was a run- off primary between two men— and Beame cut sharply into Badillo's claimed ownership of minority and ethnic groups.

Blacks and Puerto Ricans, those prominent and the people in the street, worked for Beame, voted for him— and for one reason. They want law and order. They want to walk their city streets again. They want to go out and buy their evening or early morning newspapers. They want to gather again in coffee shops.

Thus, since this mayoralty primary was held in the nation's biggest, most ethnic teeming city, it is of profound significance.

Perhaps this report should have begun with the early telephone calls made to "little Abe" the next morning by Sens. Hubert Humphrey and later Scoop Jackson. They congratulated him.

If Beame takes the city, succeeding Mayor John Lindsay, Beame gives the Democrats a powerful base for his party's big push to drive Gov. Nelson Rockefeller from office next year. If they can accomplish this, they will have the state's huge delegation to the 1976 Democratic presidential nominating convention— and the '74 mini-convention.

This could reshape powerful forces inside the party. But there are two equally vital issues here. The demand of the people— all the people, all races, creeds— for peace on their streets. And there is the reconstruction of the old coalition, the ante-McGovern majority in the almost forgotten Democratic party.

In this fight for Beame were the party machines— the famed old Bronx operation which virtually made Jack and Bob Kennedy. Tammany Hall under a union official, Frank Rosetti. The Brooklyn club organization led by Meade Esposito.

And above all, the labor movement. There were the leaders of the Black Trade Unionists, John Burnell and A. Philip Randolph. And the powerful Maritime Port Council, AFL— CIO— longshoremen, Jesse Calhoon's marine engineers, et al., coordinated by a longshoreman's official, Tony Mennella.

And the huge United Federation of Teachers, led by Al Shanker, the world's biggest local. They all got out printing. The teachers, weary of muggings, knifings, rapes and robberies, put a million leaflets into the streets for Beame. And three times circularized their 75,000 members, some 17,000 of whom are black and Puerto Rican.

And pushing with passion for Beame was velvet voiced black Manhattan Borough President Percy Sutton, the most potential 1977 mayoralty Democratic candidate.

As political analyst Ben Wattenberg, leader of the middle- of- the- road Coalition for a Democratic Majority, put it to me after the Beame 3 to 2 margin (some 200,000 vote majority was reported): "Beame became the core of traditional Democratic liberalism. He beat the new politics crowd. This is where the Democratic strength must pick up again if the party is to pick up the pieces. This is a triumph of the party's traditional wing. This is the real majority in the party."

So, in the November election, it will be Beame against Republican State Sen. John Marchi, a uniquely honest man. Thus it will be law and order with justice all the way. This is a sign of the times. Remember, this happened in "liberal" old New York.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

Brazil's Reign of Torture

WASHINGTON— The fourth in a line of military dictators, Gen. Ernesto Geisel, has just been anointed as Brazil's next president. He helped plot the 1964 military coup, which ousted the corrupt, left- leaning government of President Joao Goulart.

The military leaders have achieved an impressive economic growth and financial stability. But the price has been repression and torture. As one of Brazil's sternest judges and a member of the National Security Council, Geisel has condoned the torture tactics that have been used to keep the military regime in power.

In the august chambers of government, he is removed from the cries of the victims. But the cries have been heard by priests who have collected the grisly details. The methods of torture and the names of the torturers have been whispered to ecclesiastics. At great personal risk, couriers have smuggled the information to us.

'Parrot's Perch'

The documentation furnished us describes how the victim's wrists are lashed to his ankles, then he is hung upside down from a pipe passed under his knees. This is called the "Parrot's Perch."

In this helpless position, he is tortured with a magneto machine, sometimes called a "Little Piano," which is used to send high- voltage shocks into the victim's genital organs, nipples, eyes, ear lobes and lips.

As a variation, the upside down victim is gagged and tubes are thrust into his nostrils. Water is slowly dripped into the tubes causing convulsions. This is called the "drowning torture."

The documents also charge that "broom handles are inserted in the anus or the vagina of those being tortured." Lighted cigarettes and cigars are also applied to the most sensitive parts of the body. "This process is jocularly called 'turning the folks into ashtrays,' " report the priests.

The Tortured

We have space to mention only a few of the victims whose cases have been documented by the priests. A journalist named Carlos Nigolau Danielli, for example, was arrested in Sao Paulo last December and "intensely tortured," swear the priests. "In his cell, he wrote on the walls with his own blood, 'This blood will be avenged!' "

A woman psychology student, Aurora Maria Nascimento Furtado, was arrested last November in Guanabara, hung upside down and tortured with electrodes, then beaten to death.

"When her family and her lawyer went to claim the body, they saw a deep wound two centimeters long on her forehead," report the priests. This was evidence, they say, that "Aurora had been tortured by 'The Tourniquet,' " a piece of metal driven into the flesh by tightening a cloth or leather band.

Another student, Frederico Eduardo Mayr, was arrested in February 1972 and strapped to a galvanized metal chair. High-voltage electricity was run through his body, declare the priests, until he died. Although "covered with blood and with many hematomas," he was able to whisper the names of his torturers to a fellow prisoner.

Couldn't Move

The priests also describe the tortures of Jose Julio de Araujo who was so abused he was "incapable of any significant movement" when the police finally murdered him in August 1972.

All told, the priests cite 28 torture deaths, plus 15 others whose deaths are suspected of being caused by torture.

The names whispered by the victims, in many cases, have been identified as Army officers. To list a few, there are Captains Homero Cesar Machado, Dalmo Luiz Cirillo, Mauricio Lopes Lima, Benoni de Arruda Albernaz, Inocencio Fabricio de Matos Beltrao and Major Carlos Alberto Brilhante Ulstra.

Albernaz, for example, allegedly thrust an electric wire into a tortured priest's mouth, "telling him that it was the Host of the Sacrament."

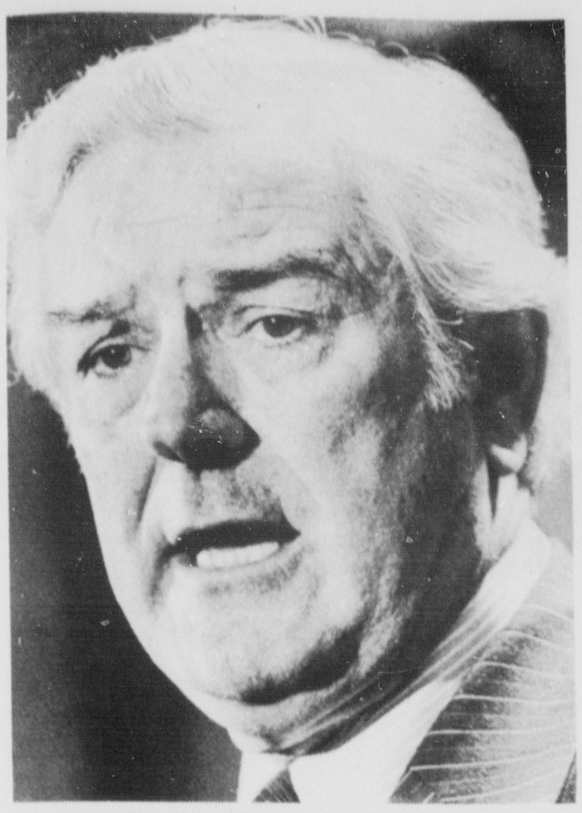
In many cases, the dying men were able to gasp to other prisoners only the partial names or nicknames of their torturers: an Army captain called "Attila," and "Investigator Dirceu who calls himself 'Jesus Christ'" and such other colorful characters as "Dr. Ney" and "Pretty Joe."

U.S. Stays Silent

The Nixon Administration, which has plenty to say about the torture of American prisoners in North Vietnam, has kept silent about the outrages in friendly Brazil. Indeed, the United States will help subsidize the torturers by sending $58 million in military aid. A new U.S. ambassador, John Crimmins, is also preparing to leave for Brazil.

We have been assured, however, that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will question Crimmins on what he thinks about torture in Brazil and what he can do to discourage it.

Footnote: The Brazilian embassy has refused to return our calls for comment. Nevertheless, we are prepared to send reporters to Brazil, if the regime will grant them complete freedom of access, to verify the details furnished by the priests.



WHATEVER CONCERNS Texan John Connally here, it shouldn't be his switch from the Democratic to the Republican party—he's talked about as the next GOP presidential nominee.

Lewallen receives top rating for 2nd consecutive year

SILVA— For the second consecutive year Camp Lewallen has received an A-100 rating, the highest possible, from the North Central Executive Committee, National Council of Boy Scouts.

Announcement of the rating was made by Dr. Mark F. Scully, president of the Southeast Missouri Council, Boy Scouts of America, Thursday night at a meeting of the council's board of directors at Camp Lewallen.

This followed a day-long inspection made of the camp by Wayne Elesy of Columbia, member of the North Central Executive Committee; William B. Pinnell, Commander James Dowdy and SeMo Council Executive Jerry Beckner, of Cape Girardeau; Camp Director Fred French and John Sargent, both of Sikeston; Steven Hatcher of Poplar Bluff; and Bradley Dehn of Dexter.

The camp also received an A-100 rating in 1972.

Joe Kiser of Piedmont, camping chairman, said the inspection had three major objectives; to review the council's current Camp Lewallen camping operation; to review the year-round camping program; and to review a written report to the executive board with recommendations for future programs.

The written report included a checklist of 117 points, some of which are mandatory for a camp to exist and others which are optional. Camp Lewallen passed on all 117 points.

Jack Armstrong, Area III Scout Executive, a guest at the meeting, said Camp Lewallen was an outstanding Camp and that this report was in no way common for a Scout camp.

Mel Vogel of Cape Girardeau, council organizational and extension chairman, reported that 970 boys has been set as the council's overall goal to be enrolled during the Fall Roundup as the result of a survey taken of district chairmen.

Ken Myles of Cape Girardeau, Fall Round chairman, announced that Sept. 24 will be "School Night for Cubbing" and Sept. 29 a "Campout for Scouting" will be held in each district as part of a coordinated council effort.

Charles Wiles, director of field services at Southeast Missouri State University and a Shawnee District Committee Chairman, reported that a computer science merit badge clinic for any Scouts in the council will be held Aug. 17-18 at the university. He added that the clinic, coordinated by the school's computer science department, is the first attempt to hold such a merit badge clinic on the council level.

Wiles, reporting for the Shawnee District, also announced the formation of a new Explorer Post in Cape Girardeau. The post, which has been organized in the area of computer science, has 15 scouts already signed up. The advisor is Seth Carmody, an employe in the computer center at Southeast Missouri State University. An organizational meeting will be held in July and anyone interested should contact the Scout office in Cape Girardeau for further details.

Kaiser, council camping chairman, also reported that a Franklin Streuwe Canoe Trail has been established. This experience, according to Kaiser, is for older Scouts and can range from two to five days in length.

Kaiser said that specifications for the new building at the Blue Springs site had been received. He said the Council could now proceed with bids on labor for construction.

Victor Hill of Cape Girardeau, council activities chairman, reported on "Weblos Day" at Camp Lewallen, which is to be held on July 14.

Special recognition in the form of a plaque was given to Lynn Whitworth of Cape Girardeau for his work in getting the swimming pool repaired in time for use at summer camp.

In attendance at the meeting, in addition to the AREA III executive was Arthur Crumb, Area III president. In brief remarks made at the end of the meeting Crumb said: "It is evident by the reports given tonight that the Council program is in excellent shape."

Defender system may shut down

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The president of the Missouri Public Defenders Association says the public defender system will have to shut down operations in six or seven months unless the Missouri legislature comes up with more money.

Association president Howard McFadden of Cole County said the General Assembly appropriated only $949,000 for the operation of the public defender offices presently established in some 14 judicial circuits in the state.

According to McFadden, the amount is about half of what is authorized by enacting legislation. He pointed out that the law requires defendants in all criminal cases must be provided with lawyers and that lawyers cannot be appointed without compensation as they once were.

At a meeting here Friday, the public defenders said the situation could lead to a breakdown in the operation of the criminal process unless necessary funds are forthcoming.

Ozark resolves labor dispute

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The lengthy labor dispute between Ozark Air Lines and the Aircraft Mechanics Fraternal Associaion ended Friday night when union members ratified a new contract and ended a 71day-long strike against the midwest air carrier.

The 560-member mechanics union, voting in St. Louis and Chicago, ratified the contract by an 86 per cent margin, according to Sam Smith, AMFA Local 24 president.

Company officials did not announce immediately how soon flights would be resumed to the 62 cities served by Ozark. Air service to 15 states was halted April 19 when the mechanics walked off the job for higher pay.

"At this time we're being rather vague about the contract's provisions," Smith said from the union's headquarters here. "It contains the removal of the electronic surveilance equipment from work areas. and a more equitable economic package."

Smith said the pay increase was within the 5.5 per cent guideline set down by the federal pay board.

The mechanics had been paid $6.02 per hour under the old contract which expired in April, 1972, and were seeking $6.82 per hour with 15-cent and 30-cent hourly premiums.

A wage settlement had apparently been worked out prior to a May 10 tentative agreement, but was rejected by the union membership because of the television surveilance issue.

The new agreement, which covers a 27-month period, will expire in July, 1974, because it is retroactive to the end of the old contract, Smith said.

An Ozark pilot, Don Burgess, said, "We're happy to be going back to work." Burgess, who is the secretary-treasurer of the local chapter of the Air Line Pilots Association, said he was told by company officials that pilots would be back on the payroll Sunday and that a regular flight schedule would be resumed July 5.

Correction

Miss Amelia Ann Shibley received a doctor of pharmacy degree June 3 from the University of Tennessee Medical Units in Memphis, Tenn. The degree she received was incorrectly listed in an article in Thursday's edition of The Daily Standard. Miss Shibley is the daughter of Mrs. Edward Shibley of 775 Pinnell Lane, New Madrid.

Gideon community fund contributed $100 and New Madrid community fund, $500.

Man convicted in Grandin slayings gets 3 life terms

HILLSBORO— Jerry Wayne Rector, one of three men accused in the Jan. 17 extortion-murders of the Bob Kitterman family near Grandin, Thursday pleaded guilty to three counts of first degree murder and was sentenced to three concurrent life terms in prison.

Rector, represented by court appointed attorney Edward Friedewald of Poplar Bluff, was sentenced by Jefferson County Circuit Judge Philip G. Hess at Hillsboro. Ripley County Prosecuting Attorney James Hall represented the state at the hearing, which was on a change of venue.

A spokesman for the Jefferson County Circuit Clerk's office said Friday that Rector was transported to the Missouri penitentiary at Jefferson City Thursday night by sheriff's officers.

Dallas Ray Delay, the 33 year-old ex-convict who has admitted his role as the trigger man in the execution-style slayings in the woods of Ripley County, pleaded guilty to the crimes in April and was sentenced by Judge James T. Riley of Cole County to three consecutive life terms in prison.

The third defendant, Lloyd Dwaine Cowin, 20, Rector's first cousin who also lived in Van Buren awaits trial in Greene County Circuit Court at Springfield.

Burlison dedicates station

Desloge -- Speaking at the dedication of a new fire station this morning, 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison of Cape Girardeau stated, "Americans can congratulate themselves for developing a system that is responsive to the will of the people."

In his remarks Burlison used the new public building as an illustration of the responsiveness of government to the people. The building was funded with federal revenue-sharing money.

Citing the importance of rapport between the citizenry and their elected representatives, Burlison said, "Communication was established between the people of Desloge who wanted and needed a fire facility and their government officials who had the means to act on this need. This is successful politics operating at its most basic level."

Burlison concluded his remarks by commemorating the 197th anniversary of American independence, stating, "The people of Desloge have the opportunity to doubly celebrate this weekend. You can celebrate our nobel heritage of freedom and independence and you are able to celebrate the postive and tangible benefits that this heritage has brought you in the form of government service."

Mayor Tim Rice hosted the dedication ceremony which was accompanied by a barbecue and carnival.

Kansas City begins porno crack down

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A crackdown on pornography has started in Kansas City under a new U.S. Supreme court decision which gives local agencies authority to define obscenity.

Judge Paul E. Vardeman of the Jackson County Circuit Court ruled Friday that 128 books are obscene and ordered them destroyed. He enjoined their further sale.

The books were seized in raids on five book stores by prosecutor Ralph Martin who said anyone selling copies of the 127 books in the future probably will be arrested.

The prosecutor also seized a film. In a petition asking the court to destroy the film, he said it is full of intimate sexual acts, normal and perverted, and has no serious artistic, literary, scientific or political value.

Circuit Judge Timothy D. 'O'Leary is to review the film Monday.

Congressman not involved

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Congressman Richard Ichord, D-Mo., says he is not an active partner in the Houston, Mo., law firm of Lay, Ichord and Smith, although it carries his name.

"I haven't practiced law since 1961," Ichord said Friday from Washington, D.C.

He said he was notified by the Attorney General's office Thursday when Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth filed a State Supreme Court suit to oust Texas County Prosecutor Marvin L. Smith.

Smith, a member of the law firm with Hubert Lay, a member of the State Park Board, was charged with 15 violations, several alleging payoffs from persons who were charged with drunken driving or speeding.

Smith, a 27-year-old Democrat, was elected prosecutor last November, without opposition.

The suit asked that a fine of $10,000 be imposed.

One of the charges was that Smith took a check for $150 on April 24 from a man who was later not prosecuted on a summons of not checking a turkey with a conservation agent.

Ichord formed the law firm with Lay and allowed it to carry his name.

SBA announces new office hours

ST. LOUIS— Boyd Corder, Small Business Administration Eastern Missouri disaster branch manager, has announced that effective Monday the SBA Disaster Circuit Rider office sites and hours will be in Cape Girardeau from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Fridays at Arena Park Building and in Sikeston, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays in Sikeston Activity Center, 201 S. Kingshighway.

The circuit rider offices in Ste. Genevieve, Charleston and Caruthersville will close, effective Monday. Flood victims who are unable to visit a SBA circuit rider office in person may mail their applications to the SBA Disaster Branch Office, No. 5 American Industrial Drive, Maryland Heights, Mo. 63043.

The deadline for filing SBA disaster loan applications in Eastern Missouri has been extended to July 31. Any disaster victim who has not filed his application by the deadline is ineligible for any SBA property, (real or personal) disaster loan assistance.

Bond issues memo to conserve fuel

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond Friday directed state departments to use smaller autos, drive them slower, and get along with room temperatures a little warmer than usual — all to save fuel.

Bond issued a memo to department and commission directors and asked them to report on their energy-saving programs by July 15. The Office of Administration will monitor the program.

Bond said that while he has proposed a Missouri Energy council to deal with the fuel shortage, "there are measures that can be taken now — and our state government must clearly lead the way."

The governor said news cars which are budgeted or purchased should be small and more economical and with fewer optional devices, if possible.

"Travel on the highways should be at reduced speeds to conserve fuel...thermostats in each office should be set two-three degrees higher and always turned off at the end of the work day," The memo said.

Federal Reserve Board boosts discount rate to member banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board has boosted the discount rate it charges member banks for borrowing to a record-high 7 per cent in an inflation-fighting move that may push up interest rates across the economy.

The board also decided Friday to raise the reserve requirements of its member banks, meaning that banks that belong to the Federal Reserve System will have to keep on hand more cash in relation to their deposits.

The board said in taking the action that it was trying "to restrain continuing excessive expansion in money and credit."

The tight-money policies of central banks were designed to cool off the nation's economy, which has been expanding at a fast rate since the first of the year, and has touched off a surge of inflation.

Not since 1921, when the board's interest rate, known as the discount rate, was 7 per cent for a brief time at the New York regional bank, has the rate been so high. For the other banks of the system, the rate was the highest in history.

The Federal Reserve Board, through its ability to in effect create money through its policies, is responsible for the nation's monetary policy. It can determine whether the nation goes through periods of tight or easy money.

The discount rate change, from 6½ per cent, is effective Monday. All but the Richmond regional bank will begin charging the new rate then, and it is expected to raise its rate to 7 per cent later next week.

The reserve requirements were increased by ½ of 1 per cent on all but the first $2 million of net demand deposits held by member banks.

The new reserve requirement will be effective in the computation period starting July 19, but it will apply to deposits held between July 5 and July 11.

Canada issues embargo on high protein exports

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The world fretted over shrinking sources of protein today as Canada put into effect an embargo on the export of soybeans and related products similar to the new U.S. ban.

Canadian Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie announced the controls on Friday to the House of Commons in Ottawa. He said they were made necessary by uncertainties resulting from the American move Wednesday aimed at conserving supplies and holding down prices of fodder for cattle, hogs and poultry.

Throughout the world, soybeans are an increasingly important ingredient in animal feeds. In Japan, the beans are also a major, direct source of human food. The Japanese reacted with shock to the embargo by the United States, which is their main supplier.

Elsewhere, there were fears that feed shortages would be followed by shortages and higher prices of pork, poultry, eggs and milk.

A soybean allocation plan is to be announced in Washington next week. Purchasers in Japan and elsewhere who thought they had firm contracts for American soybeans waited to see to what extent they would be honored. European commodity traders marked time with private deals at inflated prices.

The Chicago Board of Trade ended a one-day suspension of soybean dealings but decided to limit the daily price fluctuation in crude soybean oil futures to one cent a pound.

After the U.S. embargo, the price of soybean meal skyrocketed from $439 to $625 a ton.

Britain's Financial Times said the problem is that the general shortage of protein supplies in the world, aggravated by the growing livestock population and the failure of the Peruvian fish meal catch, has driven more and more buyers to U.S. soybeans.

In Denmark, which imported 98 per cent of its soybeans from the United States in 1972, experts said the bans would speed inflation and create critical problems for farmers and certain industries.

Canada imported nearly 15 million bushels of soybeans last year from the United States. Gillespie said the Canadian controls would allow Canada to protect its needs and those of its traditional trading partners.

The Canadian embargo covered export of soybeans, flax, rapeseed, cottonseed and linseed oil and their byproducts.

Armstrong asks for reprimand

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Former congressman O. K. Armstrong is asking fellow Missouri Republican presidential electors of 1972 to send a 'severe condemnation of those persons who planned the attempted bugging and burglarizing of the Democratic National Heaquarters in the stupid, illegal Watergate affair."

He mailed his statement to the other electors Friday. He expressed complete confidence in the integrity of President Nixon.

Armstrong was elected to Congress in 1950 from the old 6th District.

THE INVESTIGATION in Washington seems to be ignoring the message of the small sign on the lawn of one of the city's better known business complexes.

Conferees work to salvage bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate conferees today will attempt to salvage a bill that would authorize a 5.6 per cent increase in Social Security benefits and, at the same time, extend the national debt ceiling so the Treasury can continue functioning.

The measure was defeated Friday night by a stunning 190-185 vote that blocked the House from formally considering it.

Without quick action today, the nation's $465 billion debt ceiling drops at midnight to $400 billion. The actual debt is approaching $460 billion. Without the extension, the Treasury could run out of operating funds in little over a week.

The necessity for immediate action forced Congress to virtually abandon its plan to start a week's recess today.

The bill the House killed Friday, with Republicans almost solidly opposing it, was a topheavy structure the Senate had built by piling unrelated amendments on a House-passed measure to extend the debt ceiling.

It included the Social Security increase, effective next April, a variety of other welfare and unemployment benefits, and such unrelated matters as a revision of the presidential campaign income tax checkoff for financing.

About half the cost of the Social Security and related benefits, estimated at more than $3 billion over two years, would have been financed by a payroll tax increase. But Republicans warned of a presidential veto because of the uncovered costs.

As they prepared for the new conference today, Democratic strategists worked on a plan to salvage most elements of the bill, including the Social Security provisions.

House resentment against the Senate for stacking unrelated elements on the original bill played a part in the defeat of the original measure.

"We are being cynically manipulated," Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., told the House.

Vending machine stolen

A newspaper vending machine valued at $65 was reported stolen from the lobby of Missouri Delta Community Hospital sometime Thursday night, according to police.

The machine had about $2 in change in the coin box.

New chancellor named at Mo. U.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Dr. Joseph R. Hartley, professor of business administration and former dean of academic affairs at Indiana University, was today named chancellor of the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

The appointment was approved at a meeting of the MU Board of Curators. It is effective Sept. 1.

Hartley succeeds Dr. Glen Driscoll, who resigned a year ago to become president of the University of Toledo.

The new chancellor is 42 and received his doctorate in business administration from Indiana U., where he maintained a perfect 4.0 grade record in all three of his degree programs.

"Rarely do you find a person possessing both the scholarly and administrative talents that Dr. Hartley has," said C. Brice Ratchford, MU president, who recommended Hartley.

Dr. Everett Walters has been serving as the chief administration officer of UMSL.

Hartley served as chairman of the Indiana U. committee on urban affairs. He worked with the Ford Foundation in reviewing and evaluating the University of Pittsburgh. He also worked with the Indiana Study Commission on Higher Education.

Hartley is married and has two children. A native of Portland, Ind., he became a professor of business administration at Indiana U. in 1963.

Careful work required to salvage furniture

Salvaging furniture from high flood waters requires difficult and careful work. Marilyn Caselman equipment specialist in home management has prepared the following information on salvaging furniture.

Take all wooden furniture outdoors and remove as many of the drawers, slides, or other working parts as possible. These will probably be stuck tight. Do not force the drawers with a screw driver or chisel from the front. Remove the back by cutting it out if necessary and push out the drawers.

After the various moving parts of the furniture have been removed in this way, clean off all mud and dirt, using a hose stream if necessary, and then take them all indoors again and store them where they will dry out slowly. Do not leave them out in the sun as they will warp and twist out of shape.

Some furniture, especially that made of solid wood, may be salvaged by regluing. Gluing, however, is difficult to do at home because on many pieces it is necessary to use clamps. Before starting this task, decide whether it is worth investing in this equipment and whether you have the time and ability to do the work. If you find the work too difficult to attempt, consult a cabinetmaker.

Repairing veneered furniture is so difficult and requires so many different types of tools that it is not practical to try it at home. Get a cabinetmaker to do the job, or have the store from which you bought the furniture send it back to the factory to be repaired. If insurance allows part value on flood-damaged furniture, it may be worth while financially to apply the allowance on new articles rather than to pay for repairs on damaged items.

Furniture that has not been submerged may have developed white spots or a whitish film or cloudiness from dampness. If the whole surface is affected, try rubbing with a cloth wrung out of a mixture of one half cup of household ammonia and one half cup of water; wipe dry at once and polish with wax or furniture polish. For smaller areas or spots on varnished surfaces, rub with a cloth moistened with camphorated oil or oil of peppermint. A drop or two of ammonia on a damp cloth may do the work. Rub dry with a soft cloth and then polish. Cigarette ashes rubbed in with the finger tips are often effective in removing white spots. If all efforts to remove white blemishes are ineffective it may be necessary to refinish the furniture.

Brush any loose dirt from upholstered furniture and shampoo the fabric. Follow directions given for carpets and rugs. Work quickly. If there is mildew on the fabric, wipe it with a cloth wrung out of dilute alcohol (one cup denatured alcohol to one cup of water). Dry the furniture thoroughly.

If after cleaning, the upholstery looks faded or worn, a slip cover may be made using the method described in Mo. U. Circular No. 798---Make Your Own Chair Covers.

If furniture has been wet for a long time, the stuffing may have become mildewed or may ever have started to decay. It may be necessary to send the furniture to a reliable drycleaning or storage company for fumigating.

In cases of badly damaged upholstered furniture, especially any that has been submerged, stuffing may be so deteriorated that it needs to be replaced. Springs may need to be cleaned and oiled, and the frame cleaned. If much work is needed, the furniture should be sent to an experienced cabinetmaker of upholsterer unless you are confident of your own ability to do such work.

Mo. U. Ext. Circulars are available that give directions for upholstering and refinishing.

For further information on this subject, contact your County University Extension Center.

Next article in the series will be first aid for bedding and household linens by Mrs. Marilyn Caselman, equipment specialist.

Default judgement dismissed

NEW MADRID — Authorization for the dismissal of a default judgment against John McCulloch and Mitchell Hogan Jr., as his successor, was received Friday after it was found by the office of Attorney General John C. Danforth that the judgment was paid several years ago by McCulloch.

The default judgment for $1,368.62 principal for delinquent sales tax, plus $136.86 penalty and three per cent monthly interest from June 10, 1965 was awarded Tuesday in New Madrid County Circuit Court to the State of Missouri against McCulloch and Hogan.

The court dismissed the case against Hogan Thursday for failure to obtain legal service of the petition on him.

According to Circuit Clerk Van H. Sharp, the old files were being cleared out and the file on the delinquent sales tax was put on the court docket by mistake.

Tribute to Photographer Edward Steichen on "Camera Three" July 1

A tribute to one of the world's great photographers is presented in "A Remembrance of Edward Steichen" on "Camera Three" Sunday, July 1 10:00 - 10:30 AM,) on the CBS Television Network. Steichen died this year at 93, a master of fashion, still-life, portrait, commercial and war photography, with various outstanding achievements behind him that he modestly termed "apprenticeships."

This film portrait, made when Steichen was 86, captures the photographer in remembrances of his life and artistic loves. At one time the foremost fashion photographer in New York, Steichen turned to portrait, commercial and still-life photography, excelling at all.

"The photographer establishes an intimate relationship between himself and what he is photographing, whether it's a can of beans or Greta Garbo," he once said.

He saw action in both world wars, with his major focus , as always, on nature and man. "Concentrate on the faces," he told his assistants. "The sips and planes will become obsolete, but not the faces."

The definitive statement of Steichen's artistic philosophy was "The Family of Man," a huge photographic exhibit he collected from around the world for the Museum of Modern Art --completed when he was 76.

This film was written by Jane Kramer and narrated by David Wayne. Merrill Brockway is the executive producer of "Camera Three" for WCBS-TV, CBS Owned station in New York.

Cards win in 10th

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A sore shoulder has kept Luis Melendez from playing full time but hasn't affected the St. Louis Cardinal outfielder's hitting.

Melendez, called on in a pinch role a second time in a week Friday night, banged a hit up the middle with two out in the tenth inning to sink the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1.

The single boosted Melendez' pinch-hitting to 4-for-6 and lifted the Cardinals to second place in the National League's East Division.

"I'd rather be playing than pinch-hitting," the 23-year-old Puerto Rican product said, "but I'll do anything if we win."

Melendez was called to pinchhit for Jose Cruz, a left-handed batter, after Phils southpaw Mac Scarce, 0-4, walked Ted Sizemore opening the final inning.

Tim McCarver's second sacrifice moved Sizemore over and Joe Torre was walked intentionally before Ted Simmons forced Torre at second.

Scarce worked the count to 12 against Melendez, but a fast ball on the next delivery was hit to the left of shortstop Larry Bowa's glove to score Sizemore.

"Last year I was a bad pinch-hitter," noted Melendez, who hit only 4-for-21 in such capacity.

"George Kissell (Cards coach) told me if Cruz got up to bat I might get a chance. I know Jose wasn't happy that I pinch-hit, but that's part of the game."

Cruz' grounder to the right side of the infield had chased home the only Cardinals run against Phils starter Wayne Twichell, who yielded four hits through nine innings.

Sizemore's single led off the eighth and Twitchell threw wide in fielding Mc'carver's first sacrifice to set up the tying run.

Priort to that, Cesar Tovor's bouncing double over third base and a two-out triple by Greg Luzinski in the fourth had staked Philadelphia to a 1-0 lead.

The Phillies, who had won 11 of 14 previous games, loaded the bases on Del Unser's single, a Luzinski double and an intentional walk to Tommy Hutton in the ninth.

But Cards reliever Diego Segui fanned Mike Schmidt on a fast ball and repelled the threat as Bob Boone lined to Sizemore at second base and Luzinski was doubled off.

Melendez, shelved eight days by the bad shoulder, also delivered a pinch-hit six nights earlier beating the Chicago Cubs.

Cards manager Red Schoendienst, noting approval, said the 165-pound center fielder would be back in the lineup for the second of a four-game series against the Phils tonight.

The only handicap to hiring me is not knowing where to find me.

You won't find guys like me selling pencils on street corners. We're skilled, able-bodied workers. We're industrial designers. Salespeople. Secretaries. Managers. Accountants. Technicians. Blue collar and white collar.

Unfortunately, though, too many of us are unemployed.

And the irony of it is, it's not that men and women like yourself don't want to hire us. It's simply that you don't know how to go about it.

Every state in this country has a Department of Vocational Rehabilitation. Its function is not only to evaluate a person's disabilities and to help him rehabilitate himself. But to help place him in a job that allows him to fulfill his capabilities.

If you are interested in tapping your state's supply of hard-working, capable men and women, write to your State Director of Vocational Rehabilitation. His office is located in your state capital.

Tell him what kind of business you're in. What job openings need to be filled. The background, experience and skills required.

He'll be more than happy to put you in touch with the right people for your company or organization. People who will appreciate the opportunity to help your company grow. Who will work to their fullest potential. And help your company —and our nation—prosper.

Brad Locke

PB star to NWSU

NATCHITOCHES, La. — One of Missouri's top ten high school golfers, Brad Locke of Poplar Bluff, has been signed to a Northwestern State University golf scholarship by newly named Golf Coach Jack Herron.

Locke, considered the top player in the Southeast Missouri area, is a consistent par golfer on the tough and hilly courses in Southern Missouri. He was the medalist of his high school's district tournament and has won the Poplar Bluff City Tournament five years in a row.

A two- time winner of the PB Optimist Club award as the Outstanding Golfer in the area, Locke was among the top 15 golfers in the state all four years in high school, where he was an honor student.

Locke, who has shot numerous sub par rounds of golf, has a career best eight under par on a par 71 course.

Besides being a star golfer in high school, Locke also was a fine basketball player. He had several offers to play college basketball after leading Poplar Bluff Senior High in assists his senior year. The 6-foot- 1½ guard was also his team's third leading scorer.

"We think Brad will be one of the super freshmen players in the country next year," Coach Herron said of his first recruit. "We've made it to the national tournament for the last three years, but we haven't had anyone to shoot real great ... just average. I think Brad has the potential to be the golfer that could take us all the way."

Locke said he chose Northwestern because he likes the campus, the school and the coach. He also said he looks forward to playing golf more often due to Louisiana's warmer weather.

The Demon's latest recruit comes from an athletic family. Brad's father, Charles Locke, was a nine-year veteran of professional baseball.

Buys loses

NOVATO, Calif. — Greg Buys of Kennett, Mo., continued to have his trouble in the minor leagues last week, working on two innings of a game and being credited with the defeat.

Buys, transferred from the Florida State league to the Eastern AA division with the West Haven Yanks, gave up six hits, three walks and fanned only three while his earned run average balooned to 7.50. The big righthander has recorded a 2-3 season mark, working 18 innings, allowing 18 hits, 17 walks while fanning 15.

SPORTS

GOLF

ATLANTA — Newcomer Laura Baugh, 18, fired a threeunder-par 70 to share the lead after the first round of the $30,000 Lady Tara Golf Classic with veteran Sandra Haynie.

FOOTBALL

HORSE RACING

NEW YORK — Blessed Angelica, $6.40, won the $20,000 Miz Clementine Purse by a neck at Aqueduct.

OCEANPORT, N.J. — Mongongo, $12.20, copped the $8,500 feature at Monmouth Park.

BOSTON — Pilot Knob, $4, romped to an easy victory in the $14,000 feature at Suffolk Downs.

Herons studied

Bootheel heron

The heron, familiar bird of Missouri's streams and shallows, gathers in flocks to nest. One heronry in southeast Missouri near Sikeston has some 5,000 birds in it — so many that the sheer number of birds may be killing the trees in which they nest.

An aging stand of shortleaf pines, isolated on all sides by cultivated fields, is proving to be one of the most important heronries in Missouri-- at least for the time being.

The heronry, near Sikeston, has an estimated 5,000 herons-- mostly little blue herons, but also including cattle egrets, black-crowned night herons, common egrets and snowy egrets.

Paul Heye, associate professor of biology at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau, has studied the area since 1965 and has seen the population climb from 2,700 nests to a high of 4,900 in 1972, with an average of 4,200.

But there are problems with the heronry. One is that the sheer number of birds may be killing the seven acres of pines. Another is the possibility of disturbance from visitors to nearby Rainbow Lake.

The birds tolerate some disturbance-- Interstate 55 is within a half mile of the heronry-- but very close contact could result in the birds picking up and leaving.

It happened once before, in 1968, when the herons left a nest site near Bertrand. Heye thinks the fact that a pair of great horned owls nested in the pine stand before the herons arrived may have discouraged them and caused them to move to the present pine stand.

Heye and Dr. Leigh H. Fredrickson, director of the University of Missouri's Gaylord Memorial Laboratory at Puxico, think evidence indicates a declining population of herons in North America, despite the rise in population of the Scott County heronry.

"Protection of the herons from disturbance and from outright killing is the best immediate means of protection for this wildlife resource," Heye says.

Harold Holland, district forester for the Department of Conservation, and Jack Boyles, Duck Creek Wildlife Area manager, also checked the heronry.

They found the pine stand stagnated and dying-- partly because the trees never had been thinned since they were planted. But the herons are nesting in dead trees as well as live ones, so any timber management would hurt the heronry.

Since the birds moved once, obviously they could move again, but since the Bootheel area is intensively farmed, there are few tree stands left suitable for a heron nest site.

"It's possible that the birds will kill the entire stand within five years if the present amount of use is continued," Boyles says. In addition to the other problems, there is some hint of industrial development along I- 55 in the vicinity of the heronry which almost certainly would put an end to it."

Royals struggle

Luis Melendez's 10th-inning single produced a 2-1 victory for the St. Louis Cardinals over Philadelphia Friday night while the Kansas City Royals succumbed to the one-hit pitching of the Texas Rangers' Jim Bibby.

The Phillies scored first at St. Louis when Cesar Tovar doubled and Greg Luzinski tripled in the fourth inning. The Cards tied it in the eighth on Ted Sizemore's single, an error, a walk and Jose Cruz's bases-loaded single.

Sizemore opened the 10th with a walk and Tim McCarver sacrificed him to second. Joe Torre was walked, then Melendez batted for Cruz and whacked the winning single.

In Texas, the Rangers blanked Kansas City 3-0 for the Royals' fifth straight loss as Bibby got his first pitching victory in the American League. It was his third start since he was acquired from the St. Louis Cardinals June 6.

The Royals' only hit was Fran Healy's lead-off double in the sixth. Mark Littell, Royals' rookie, gave up one run and five hits before Bruce Dal Canton took over in the seventh. Littell's record is 1-2.

Texas scored in the first inning on Dave Nelson's double, a bunt and an infield out.

Frank White, grad of Academy

KANSAS CITY (AP)— The Kansas City Royals wasted no time pinning a nickname on rookie Frank White.

White has been known as "Academy Frank" since the day he was called up by the Royals from their Omaha farm club in the American Association.

The nickname was a natural. White is the first graduate of the Royals Baseball Academy at Sarasota, Fla., to don a major league uniform.

"No, I didn't think when I went to the academy in 1970," says White, a shortstop and second baseman, "I'd ever play with Kansas City. I always hoped..."

White's hopes became reality less than three weeks ago when shortstop Fred Patek was placed on the 15-day disabled list. After playing second base at Omaha, White was inserted into the Kansas City lineup at shortstop.

"I've already found out one thing," the 22- year- old White says, "I can play defense up here. It will take a little while to get to hitting... at least one time around the league."

Baseball isn't new to White as it is for many of the prospects who wind up at the academy, founded three years ago by Royale owner Ewing Kauffman as a spawning ground for major league material. Academy Frank has been playing baseball since he was 13.

"I didn't play baseball in high school," White notes, "but I played Connie Mack, Ban Johnson and Casey Stengel League baseball."

White used to climb up in the football bleachers at Lincoln High School, located on a hill outside old Municipal Stadium where the Athletics and then the Royals used to play, and nibble on barbeque and watch the games night after night. Yes, and dream of becoming a big league ball player.

"I saw a lot of stars play in the stadium," White recalls. "And I had two idols...Hank Aaron and Jackie Robinson. I never saw Robinson but I always admired the things he stood for and what he accomplished."

White might never have tried out for the academy if it hadn't been for his wife, Gladys. He was working as a shipping clerk when he heard about the academy tryouts.

"They invited me to come over," White explains, "and I put it off for a couple of days. I don't think I would have ever gone if it wasn't for my wife. She wanted me to give it a try."

White went through the running, throwing, hitting and infield routines and the speed tests.

"Norm Siebern was a scout for the Royals," White says. "He was watching me and said I looked like a hitter. He liked the way I ran and the way I threw."

During his brief time with Kansas City, White has made some sensational plays in his shortstop role. He has impressed Manager Jack McKeon.

Eftink stars

CHAFFEE— Ricky Eftink made rather easy work of Sikeston Friday night, limiting the 13- year old all- stars to two hits and pitching Chaffee into the state tournament at Ft. Leonardwood next week.

The curve- ball artist baffled Sikeston batters throughout the seven inning contest and held them scoreless for three innings. Eftink fanned nine batters and walked six.

Sikeston started the evening with a 3- 1 decision over Chaffee behind the two hit hurling of Francis to force the second and deciding game.

Thursday night Sikeston won a doubleheader, beating Tri- County and East Prairie to move into the finals.

Gary Little provided the hitting for Chaffee, going three for six in the two games.

Vanduser loses

Vanduser was dropped by Scott City 13-7 in Friday night play of the SEMO Softball League.

Vanduser picked up an early lead going ahead of Scott City 4-2. But Scott City remained in the game when Mark Amick hit a grand slam which gave them the advantage. Dover came back in the third for Vanduser when he slapped a three- run homer which brought the game to a tie. Vanduser faded away after that big play while Scott City went on and scored six more times to take the win. Earl Cottner had the win and Bill Gillian suffered the loss.

Longstreet stars

Kiwanis picked up a National Little League win over Lions, 9-3, Friday night.

The score was tied at 1-1 in the first inning and remained so until Kiwanis came around for two runs in the fourth. The following inning, Kiwanis added six additional runs for insurance to take the win as the Lions rally fell short. Smith, Garrett, Stinnett and Echols all hit doubles for Kiwanis. Lions' Longstreet was three- for- three, slapping out a double and triple. Throop also added a home run for the Lions. Campbell was on the mound for Kiwanis while Braden took the loss for the Lions.

Greer homers

Long pitched Sikeston Standard to a 6-4 win over Collins and Kingsway Plaza coasted to a 12-1 victory over Nunnelee in the Musial Little League Friday night.

Moore and Greer were the hitting powers for the Standard. Moore hit a double and Greer blasted a round tripper. Sikeston Standard held a 6-2 lead in the fourth and had to struggle to keep Collins from threatening. Carr, the losing pitcher, also had the only extra base hit of the game for Collins with a double.

Nunnelee scored their only run in the first inning and failed to move any farther against Kingsway Plaza. Tied at 1-all for the first two innings, Kingsway finally broke through to take slim lead by two. But continued steady play produced consistent runs for Kingsway, with their strongest inning coming in the fourth when they came around the bases five times. Williams, the winning pitcher, had a double. Hammock and Buchannan both hit doubles for Nunnelee. Bickford suffered the loss.

Eagles, Nowell lose Jr. games

Davis & Bird won a 5-2 decision over Eagles and Home Materials downed Nowell 14-7 in Friday night's Jr. Babe Ruth League.

Boardman was working on a no-hitter but the Eagles finally broke through and gained two hits off of him in the fourth inning. No score was made for the Eagles until the sixth when a single run was brought around. Davis & Bird had built up a small lead during the early innings but were able to withhold the Eagles attempts to threaten. The only extra base hit of the game came with a triple from Shell of D & B. Russell pitched the game for Eagles.

Wright and Laseter led the hitting for Home Materials to help carry them to the win. Both were two- for- two at bat with one of the hits being a double. Home Materials held a steady pace in scoring to build up a lead over Nowell. Nowell had a big inning in the fourth, scoring five, but could not add to it to overtake Home Materials. Dockins was the winning and Newman the losing pitcher.

Missouri Elk

JEFFERSON CITY— Old No. EE 6987 remains, as he has remained for more than three years--a conundrum all wrapped up in an enigma.

The basic puzzle is: how did a Wyoming tagged elk come to be killed for a white-tailed deer in the middle of Osage County, Missouri?

Even if the creature sprouted wings and flew from his last known home, he had a 750 mile flight before touching down in Missouri.

The elk was killed during the 1969 deer season in Missouri and the hunter who did it is above suspiction. He thought the elk was a deer and, when he found it, it wasn't reported to the conservation agent.

Since then, various people in the Department of Conservation have tried to find out how the elk got so far from home, but the trail leads only as far as Lusk, Wyo., in the southeast part of the state, and there it disappears.

The elk bore two tags, one a Wyoming Game and Fish Commission tag and the other a U.S. Department of Agriculture brucellosis- test tag. Both have been checked out.

Dr. R.L. Pyles, veterinarian in charge of the USDA office in Jefferson City checked through USDA files and found that the elk was one of 51 tested for brucellosis in January, 1968. It was trapped in Yellowstone National Park in northwest Wyoming and released near Lusk.

George Kaminski, information chief for the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission, confirmed the USDA history.

"The elk was tagged in January, 1968, as a male calf and released in Rawhide Buttes near Lusk," he writes. "It is possible the elk transplanted from Yellowstone could have moved out of the area. It was reported that one of these elk moved into southern Colorado and was harvested at the Trinchera Ranch."

If so, that's a 300- mile odyssey and would involve a detour around the heavily populated Denver area. Perhaps the 47 elk that were released near Lusk had an unusual amount of elk wanderlust?

But at least the Lusk-Trinchera elk stuck with the Rocky Mountains. It's hard to believe an elk crossed Nebraska and/or Kansas and half of Missouri, except possibly as a guest in someone's railroad car or truck.

That is the other possibility-- that the elk was illegally rustled from Wyoming and sold or released in Missouri. Obviously no one is going to come forward and confess to elk rustling.

But there is no evidence to suggest anyone rustled No. 6987 either.

So No. Ee 6987 remains a mystery within a conundrum all wrapped up in an enigma. Perhaps he should be given a name instead of a number. How about "Cotton- Eyed Joe?" Remember the lyrics? "Where did you come from?/ Where did you go?/ Where did you come from, Cotton-Eyed Joe?"

DOES HOLLYWOOD SUCCESS COST TOO MUCH?

A startled Poteet Canyon gets an unexpected phone call from Virgilia Downspout, flamboyant editor of a popular women's magazine.

Ms. Downspout offers Poteet, ace girl journalist and former ward of Colonel Steve Canyon, a fascinating free- lance assignment to cover the seamy side of life in the New Hollywood.

First, she is to answer a "Talent Wanted" advertisement aimed at overeager young people. Then go to the film capital and report on what really awaits them there.

Does Hollywood success cost too much? Is it right to discourage youngsters from going there to seek fame and fortune?

Poteet Canyon finds some surprising answers, and gets a close look at her own motives in accpeting the assignment, in the fast- moving new story in --

Price jump pushes parity ratio to 15 year high

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 6 per cent jump in pricesfarmers received in the month ending June 15, including boosts for soybeans, corn, hogs and wheat, pushed the Agriculture Department's parity ratio to the highest level in 15 years.

The parity ratio, a cost-price relationship based on the period 1910-14, was 88 per cent at mid-June, the department reported Friday. Farm prices are theoretically in balance with those producers pay out to meet expenses when the ratio is 100 per cent.

According to USDA records, the June 15 parity was the highest since March 1968. It was 85 in May and 74 a year earlier. Although the prices farmers pay to meet expenses rose 2 per cent to another record high, those they received advanced much faster.

Soybeans, in so short a supply that the Nixon administration has decided to ration exports, averaged a record $10 per bushel, up from $8.27 in May and $3.32 a year ago.

Hogs were $37.20 per hundredweight at mid-June compared with $35.20 in May and the record high of $38.30 last March.

Corn was $1.99 per bushel, up from a May average of $1.61 and a year-earlier level of $1.13 per bushel.

Wheat, at $2.43 per bushel, eclipsed the season igh of $2.38 set last winter and was the most in more than 25 years, the department said. The May wheat average was $2.15 and a year ago was $1.33 a bushel.

High soybean prices, which triggered an embargo on exports earlier this week and promises of regulated shipments overseas in the future, are expected to stimulate a boost in production this year.

The American Soybean Association, Hudson, Iowa, said Friday that a survey among producers showed that soybean plantings this year will be 56.3 million acres, up nearly 20 per cent fron the 47 million farmers planted for harvest in 1972.

That is about in line with what USDA officials expect soybean plantings to be, but the association said yields this year may be down slightly from 1972 to around 27.3 bushels per acre. That would mean a crop of about 1.51 billion bushels, a little less than the department's projection of 1.55 billion.

The department will issue on July 10 a report showing updated figures for plantings of soybeans and other spring crops.

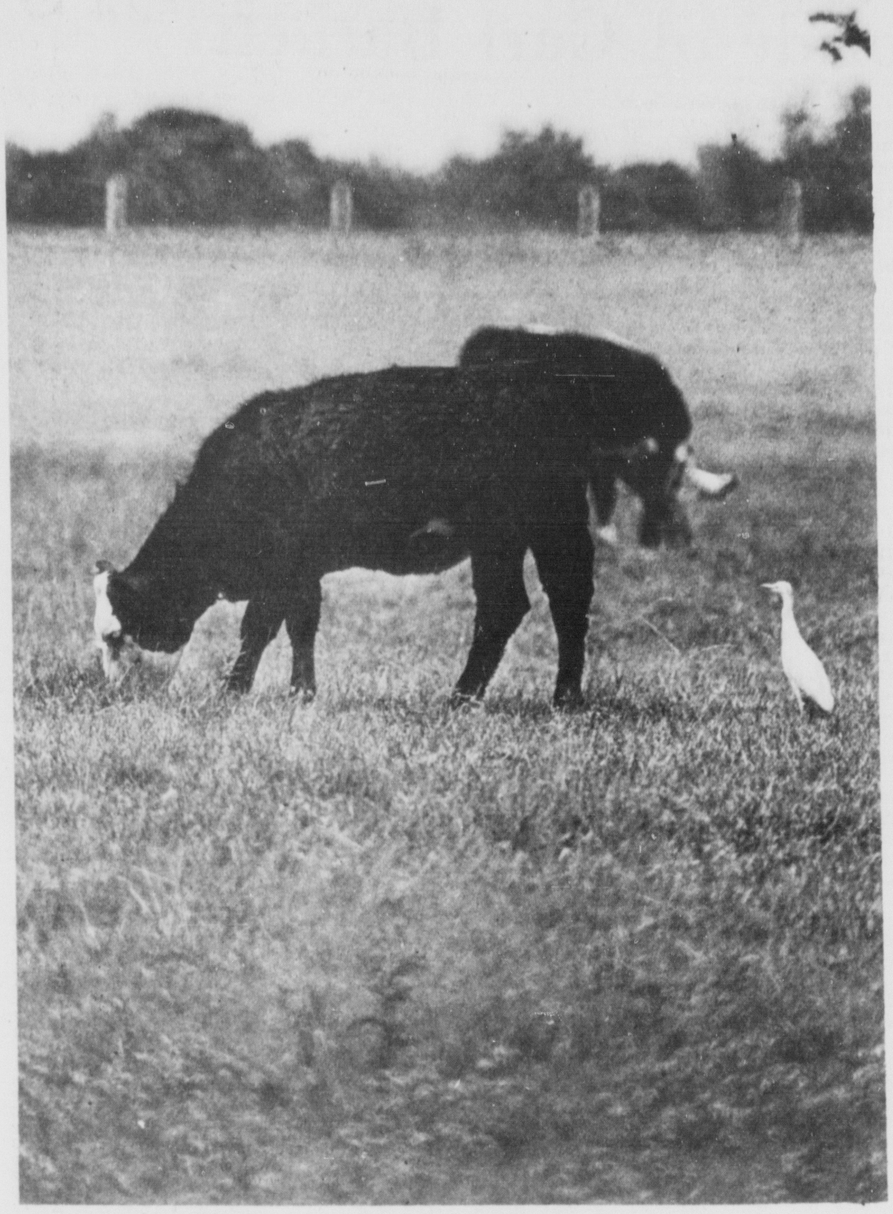
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department, although abandoning its "Plentiful Foods" program, still is ving promotional assistance to farm products it says need marketing assistance.

The Plentiful Foods program, started in 1945, officially will end Aug. 1. It was designed as a monthly service to let consumers know of specific commodities which were expected to be in fjture abundance and therfore good buys at stores.

But such items have been scarcer lately and the department decided a few weeks ago to cancel the plantiful foods program. Beef, for example, had not been on the monthly list since June 1967. Instead, products such as beans, corn meal and grits have been featured.

The USDA said, however, that market promotion would be continued as required when specific situatimns arose. This week officials announced that fresh Bartlett pears and sweet cherries will be in larger-than usual supply during July.

Consequently, the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said it is cooperating with the food industry and the news media in efforts to promote the two fruits.



Egret in search of food

Perhaps this isn't what might be thought of as a typical farming scene in the Sikeston area, but it is a very common sight that shows one of the many natural friends of Bootheel agriculture. The bird is a Cattle Egret, one of several species of similar birds which summer in the Bootheel and forage for their food by following farm animals and at times tractors. When the animals move through grass, stirring up insect pests, the Cattle Egret will jab out with its long bill and grab a tasty lunch. Flocks of dozens of the birds may be seen in a large herd in search of food. (Daily Standard photo by Tim Ludwig)

A link with the past

Farming this year certainly isn't what it used to be. Due to the heavy rains and flooding of the past few months, many area farmers are still wondering when and what to plant. Farming isn't the same in other ways, too, such as the equipment in almost universal use on midwest farms. This ancient and unused manure spreader is a remnant of a time when horses were almost the only horse power used on a farm. Now it stands dormant beside a field of wheat just south of Morley on Highway 61.

Weather outlook for the Bootheel

By LEONARD F. HAND

The 30-day weather outlook for the Missouri Bootheel through the month of July looks for a continuation of trends established in June. Temperatures are expected to average below the Normal for this time of year, and rainfall is assigned to the near normal category.

This combination suggests that high pressure will continue to divert moisture from the Gulf of Mexico through Texas to the southwest. That pattern was established during the latter half of June, and accounted for the change to a more scattered and less massive rainfall distribution for the Bootheel. The heavier and more vigorous activity followed a course to the north, as the track of primary low pressure centers shifted in that direction. Most of Missouri is slated for above normal July precipitation, with the southern fringe of the state falling within the Near Normal category.

High pressure systems crossing the Nation would be the source of both cooler and less humid air being drawn into the region from the west and north. This would be compatible with the more static character of high pressure preventing a moist southerly flow from reaching the Mid-south for as long a duration as usual this time of year.

One feature of near normal July rainfall is that it provides less assurance of either sufficient volume, or equal distribution of water to Bootheel farms. We saw some of this in late June when farmers were looking for rains to replenish moisture in dry seedbeds for soybean germination and emergence. Since much of our rain will be delivered by electrical storms, variability will also be a predictable feature.

Open weather for cultivating should be well monitored by following trends outlined in the Extended Outlooks issued daily by the National Weather Service. These will also be the best guides for anticipating wind conditions favorable for orchard spraying and, later in the month, sorghum midge control. Corn heat stress is not as likely to show up under the pattern outlined.

Area Entomological Specialist Flernoy Jones, in his weekly Cotton Insect Report, indicates that spider mites were not problems as June drew to an end. Cooler than normal temperature averages for July may maintain lower incidence of this pest which prospers under hot weather conditions. He also emphasises need to watch plant bug populations for needed controls if the highest percentage of early set fruit is to be protected. Both Southwestern and European corn borers had shown up in numbers calling for control before the end of June. Several of the usual insect problems are likely to be complicated by the late character of the season, as well as weather trends.

Water stress should not be as critical as in some previous years. Most crops are spreading roots into fully charged subsoil moisture reservoirs. Although Normal July rainfall is less than 3 and 1/2 inches, present water content will carry the demand by cotton and soybeans. Corn, may be the exception, calling for about 8 inches of water during the month, and usually occupying land with lower water holding capacity.

Noteworthy during June, particularly the latter half, was the slacking off of heavy and persistent rains. With flooding problems out of the picture, the increased duration between wettings was as beneficial as the lowered volume of rain gage catches. Total rainfall at Agricultural Weather Stations from June 1 through 29, when this outlook was prepared, ranged from: 2.39 inches at Kennett, to 2.69 at Charleston, 2.95 at Malden, 3.59 at Sikeston, 5.72 at Poplar Bluff and 5.79 inches at Portageville.

Normal rainfall for the Bootheel as a whole in July is 3.34 inches. Normal for individual Bootheel cities are:

Cape Girardeau 2.85 inches, Dexter 3.22 inches, Fisk 3.29 inches, New Madrid 3.79 inches, Poplar Bluff 3.33 inches, Caruthersville 3.56 inches, Doniphan 3.72 inches, Morehouse 2.86 inches, Parma 3.45 inches and Sikeston 3.12 inches.

Short term averages for other cities: Advance 3.18 inches, Bloomfield 3.34 inches, Clearwater Dam 2.69 inches, Kennett 3.17 inches, Portageville 3.48 inches, Wappapello Dam 3.35 inches, Bernie 3.44 inches, Charleston 3.41 inches, Deering 3.23 inches, Malden 3.37 and Puxico 3.07.

Long term records show that for July with near normal rainfall, averages range from 3.41 inches at Poplar Bluff, to 3.14 at Sikeston, and 3.35 inches at Caruthersville. Under those conditions rainfall totals have ranged from 2.75 to 4.00 inches at Poplar Bluff, from 2.45 to 3.82 inches at Sikeston, and from 2.48 to 4.01 inches at Charleston.

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — Massive fossilized tree trunks, believed to be oaks which grew 300 million years ago, have been found in a deep coal mine.

Dr. Friedrick Schmidt-Bleek, a chemistry professor at the University of Tennessee, said the petrified trunks weigh six tons and are about 45 inches in diameter.

"The amazing thing to me is that these trees were found in an upright formation," he said.

Cities and Counties benefit from soil survey reports

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles by Scott County District Soil Conservationist Jerry T. Harlow describing the benefits and uses of soil surveys.

More uses can be made of soil survey information by city and county governments than any other individual or group of individuals.

Ronald Yersak, planning director of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission, says the planning commission uses the generalized soils surveys in its regional planning program. Information contained in the regional general soils survey was used in both the commission's solid waste management plan and recreation plan for parks and open space. The commission also requests the Soil Conservation Service to provide generalized soils maps for various municipalities in the Bootheel when under contract to prepare a local comprehensive plan.

Information contained in these documents enables the planning commission staff to develop a future land use map for the municipalities or, when doing regional studies, it is used as a tool to guide the planning staff in determining the best land use purpose."

Soil survey information can be used as a basis for land evaluation by county governments. Monroe County is planning to use its soil survey for this very purpose.

Soils information is an important factor in zoning for a city or county. Soils vary widely in their characteristics. Some are well suited for a particular use, but are poorly suited for another.

City and county governments use soils information, when available, to determine the best routes for water and sewer lines. They also use soils interpretations to determine road construction methods that will result in reduced maintenance.

The lise of uses is almost unlimited. Many of our county and city officials are realizing that a soil survey is phase one of good planning. With the right information they can get ahead of the bulldozer and prevent problems before they occur.

Eliminates dumps

Soil surveys are used to locate suitable sites for sanitary landfills.

Butler farmer trading jobs

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles featuring Farm Families of the year in five Bootheel counties.)

By PAT GROJEAN

HARVIELL— Mr. and Mrs. Garland C. Boswell, Butler County Farm Family of the Year, are not going to be farmers any more. Boswell has sold all but 55 acres of his farm, but kept his house.

His main source of income now will be the C. and G. Welding Shop in Naylor. He is planning to build a new building and add a farm supply store to his welding business. It will probably be September or October before he opens the new store Boswell said. Why is he abandoning farming? "I figure maybe I can make more money on what I have invested," Boswell said.

He had been farming about seven years 16 miles southwest of Poplar Bluff. On the remaining land he has 19 head of cattle which he raises and sells as feeders.

Boswell opened his welding shop in Naylor in 1968. From this shop he made service calls to farmers in the area. The welding shop and farm each probided about half of the family's income.

Boswell has been a welder for about 18 years, working in construction before farming.

Boswell is a member of the Naylor school board and the Naylor Lions Club.

Mrs. Boswell graduated with highest honors from Three Rivers Community College Friday night. This marked the completion of Registered Nursing School for her. She will shortly begin work as an RN in the Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Mrs. Boswell has been working in hospitals for 21 years.

The Boswell's have one son, Kevin, who is 15.

When asked if he had any interesting experiences while farming, Boswell replied, "All experiences were interesting."

Pride of Butler County

Hard work and accomplishments earned Mr. and Mrs. Garland C. Boswell of Harviell the honor and certificate they received in March as Butler County Farm Family of the Year. But the Boswells are not going to be farmers any more. They have sold most of their farm and Boswell plans to build a new welding shop in Naylor and add a farm supply store to it. Ann Landers

Former addict tells his story

Dear Ann Landers: If you publish this letter it will probably take up your whole column, but it will be worth it if you can save just one kid from going through the hell I experienced trying to get off the hard stuff.

I am a former heroin addict now in the methadone program. I was shooting dope regularly for two years. I missed very few days and the days I did miss I was sick as a dog with stomach cramps, throwing up all over. I had to spend at least $50 a day just so I wouldn't get sick and I wasn't even getting high.

My best friends were mainliners. I was very close to five guys and every one of them is dead now. Two O.D.'s and three died of hepatitis from dirty needles. I got hepatitis myself last year. My girl caught it from me and so did my sister. We were all in the hospital at the same time. My sister very nearly didn't make it. (Can you imagine my quilt?)

Even though I'm off the stuff now I can't get a decent job because I have to take a physical. When the doc sees the tracks on my arms he knows I was an addict and it goes on my record. Nobody wants an ex-junkie.

Almost everybody who shoots has to push the stuff in order to support the habit. My best friend was my partner. We lived in constant fear of getting busted. The penalty in this state is life imprisonment.

Trafficking in dope means going to the worst neighborhoods in the world. I've seen guys killed for $5 worth of snow or a lid of horse. There's a lot more I could tell you but this letter is already too long. Like when your parents find out about you -- you'll want to kill yourself. I mean it. And I could tell you about some of the chicks on the street. I saw them when they first started hustling. Really beautiful. After six months of prostitution, they look like their own grandmothers. By the way, I started on pot, like all the other needle freaks and acid heads I know. Don't let anybody tell you different. Sign me --- Straightening Out In Massapequa And It's A Rough Go.

Dear S. M.: Here's your letter --- every bit of it --- and I didn't change a word. Thank you for writing and my hat is off to you, fella.

Dear Ann Landers: Several months ago we were invited to an elaborate wedding, complete with reception, dinner and the works. It must have cost a fortune. Yesterday a friend who is close to the bride's family told me she knew for a fact that the couple did not have a marriage license and they didn't sign any papers. It was a phony ceremony.

It seems the groom's divorce didn't come through in time for the second marriage to be valid, so they decided that since the invitations had been sent out and the plans were made, they would go ahead with the wedding and be legally married later by a J.P. or something. They actually did get married the following month by a judge.

I believe the guests were taken advantage of and I, for one, feel like a fool. I'd like to let the couple know that it was a dirty thing to do to the guests. My husband says to forget it. What do you say, Ann? -- Feeling Foolish in Suffolk

Dear Foolish: The couple was obviously caught in a web of unfortunate circumstances and they solved their delimma in the way that seemed best to them. I'm with your husband.

Citizens needed for participation in justice system

A meeting, cosponsored by The Southeast Division of the Missouri Association for Social Welfare, Knights of Columbus and the Dexter and Sikeston Jaycees, was held Sunday at the Heritage House Senior Citizens Home, 305 Cresap St.

In his address, Lawrence J. Ulm, co-ordinator, Volunteers in Corrections, Missouri Association for Social Welfare, pointed out that until citizens actively participate in the criminal justice system, "little progress can be expected." In becoming a volunteer probation and parole officer, a citizen is asked to donate an hour a week in counseling with young adult offenders.

According to Glen Duckworth, district supervisor of probation and parole, "Many of these young men and women are first offenders. We have two kinds of offenders, those who commit crimes against persons and those who commit crimes against property. We are aiming our program at the nonviolent, young offender who needs a friend."

Melvin Glueck, chairman of the Prison Concern Committee, Knights of Columbus, spoke of the drop in the recidivism rate among young offenders who has a volunteer assisting him in the community. "That alone," said Glueck, "should be reason enough to get involved."

James Crenshaw, a Sikeston attorney and himself a volunteer, related how he has helped a young man assigned to him obtain a driver's license and re-enroll in school. He is also helping to seek employment for the offender. "It has been a very satisfying experience for me," said Crenshaw.

The Volunteers in Corrections program is seeking mature, friendly individuals to become an inspiring individual for some of the areas 600 probationers or parolees. Volunteers are screened, trained, matched and supervised by probation personnel.

If you are interested in learning more about this program, contact the Missouri Association for Social Welfare, 113 B West High St., Jefferson City, Mo. 65101 , phone (314) 636-4129 or the District 14 Probation Office, 210 West Stoddard Ave. , Dexter, Mo. 63841, phone (314) 624-3528.

Lillian Raby, Stan Evans unite in June ceremony

ESSEX -- Amid a setting of blue candles, white and blue mums and greenery, Miss Lillian Mae Raby became the bride of Stanley Keith Evans at 8 p.m. June 9 in Taylor General Baptist Church at Essex. The Rev. Carl Robbins of Puxico officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Miss Raby is the daughter of Dorothy Raby of Kansas City and the granddaughter of Mr. Lillian Butler of Dexter with whom whe has been living. Evans is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hollon G. Evans of Essex.

The bride chose for her wedding a floor-length gown of sheer organza. The A-line dress featured a chapel-length train and bishop sleeves which tapered to a point. Lace and seed pearls accented the front of the dress and the yoke. The edge of the train and shoulders and cuffs of the dress were also dressed in lace.

Her elbow-length veil was held secure with a Juliet headpiece of lace and pearls. She carried a cascading bouquet of white gladioli with blue roses and blue ribbons.

Debby_ North of Cape Girardeau was matron of honor and Linda Raby, sister of the bride, and Pam Palmer were bridesmaids. They wore blue crepe, Victorian-styles, floor-length gowns and blue veils with crepe bows. Each carried blue mums with white pompoms surrounding.

Miss Lori Hume was flower girl and wore a dress styled like the ones worn by bridesmaids. She carried a white basket with blue mum petals.

Perry Evans served his brother as best man and Keith Cates of Dexter and Dale Connor were groomsmen. The groom wore a black tuxedo and the groomsmen wore blue tuxedos.

Kevin Evans, nephew of the groom, was ringbearer.

The bride's mother wore a floor-length turquoise knit dress with white accessories and the mother of the groom wore a pink knit dress with sheer sleeves and white accessories. The bride's grandmother wore a blue knit dress with gold accessories. All three wore a white rose corsage.

A reception followed the ceremony at the church. The couple honeymooned in Springfield and Branson and now lived in Cape Girardeau where he attends Southeast Missouri State University.

Miss Yarbrough is June bride of Carl Barnett

Miss Rhonda Yarbrough and Carl Barnett were married in a candlelight ceremony at 8 p.m. June 14 at Shady Acres Church of Christ by the minister, Manly Luscombe.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Yarbrough, 303 Kennedy Drive, and Barnett's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Barnett, 202 Lions St.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore an original gown designed by her aunt, Brenda Miller. The white satin dress featured a flounced hemline and Victorian collar. White re-embroidered lace accented the botton of the gown along the flounce and the front of the dress to the empire waist. The leg of mutton sleeves cuffs were also overlaid with lace.The gown featured a long train and chapel-length veil of illusion edged in re-emboidered lace. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white gardenias with streamers and greenery.

Kim Yarbrough, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of orange polyester overlaid with dotted Swiss and matching picture hat with white daisies and ribbon. She carried a wicker basket of white daisies with multi-colored bow and streamers.

Kim Bailey, Connie Marble, Gail Dyer and Cindy Lambert were bridesmaids and wore dresses identical to the one worn by the maid of honor except in shades of pink, lilac, green and blue. They wore picture hats trimmed with white daisies and ribbon, to match the dresses. All carried wicker baskets of white daisies and multi-colored bows and streamers.

Candlelighters were Cindy Bass and Bonnie Marble. They wore dresses of yellow dotted Swiss made like those of the other attendants and also wore picture hats to match. The girls wore wrist corsages with multi-colored bows.

Darrell Alsup was best man and groomsmen were David Hough, Charlie Dye, Doug Griffen and Steve Lambert. Groomsmen also served as ushers.

The men were attired in white brocade tuxedos with rainbow-colored ruffled shirts trimmed in black. They also wore black bowties and lily of the valley boutonnieres.

Mrs. Yarbrough, the mother of the bride ,chose a deep aqua floor-length dress of polyester chiffon over taffeta lining. Mrs. Barnett wore a pink dress of polyester knit. Both mothers wore gardenia corsages.

The bride's grandmothers and great-grandmother, Mrs. Rutha Lawrence, Mrs. Ozella Yarbrough and Mrs. Lottie Lawrence, also wore gardenia corsages.

Marsha Lawrence, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a floor-length dress of blue dotted Swiss fashioned like those worn by the bride's attendants and carried a wicker basket of white daisies.

Kevin Miller, cousin of the bride, was ringbearer and wore a black tuxedo and wore a blue ruffled shirt to match the flower girl's ensemble.

Debbie Campbell presided at the guest book and was attired in a floor-length floral dress of organza. She wore a corsage of mixed color daisies.

Those serving at the reception were Debi Dewitt of Chicago and Brenda Miller, aunts of the bride, and Liz Ferrell, sister-in-law of the groom. They wore floor-length dresses of different pastel shades and corsage of mixed daisies.

The bride's table was covered with white tablecloth overlaid with white net and trimmed with bows of multi-colored ribbons.

The four-tiered cake centered the table and on each side was a flower arrangement of multi-color daisies and two candelabras. There was a large punch bowl on each end of the table. Silver serving dishes were used to serve nuts and mints.

The couple lives at 301 Branum St.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding included: Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Thomas and Lisa and Clay of Omaha, Neb., Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Cashon and Mrs. Paul Loiseau of Cape Girardeau; and Mrs. Edward Pace, Mrs. Patsy Walters, Mrs. Relton Pace and Mrs. Thelma Trammel of Arkansas.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Barnett and Mrs. and Mrs. Barry Ferrell, parents and sister of the groom, entertaned the wedding party with a rehearsal dinner June 12 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ferrell.

The bride was honored with a bridal shower June 5 in the fellowship room of Shady Acres Church of Christ. Mrs. Bill Marble, Mrs. Kenneth Campbell and Mrs. Ben Chambers were hostesses.

On June 11, Kim Bailey, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Carl Bailey, hosted a shower in honor of the bride.

Marshall, Beitel vows exchanged on June 23

Mrs. Ronald Jay Beitel

Miss Mary Elizabeth Marshall and Ronald Jay Beitel were united in marriage at a candlelight ceremony June 23 at St. Francis Xavier Church. Monsignor Walter J. McGrane of Joplin officiated at the double - ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Marshall III of Blodgett. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Ben F. Marshall Jr. of Blodgett and the late Ben F. Marshall Jr., and Mrs. Ralph Frazer Anderson of Sikeston and the late Ralph F. Anderson. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Warren L. Beitel of Rock Springs, Wyo.

The wedding vows were exchanged in a setting of urns of white stock and baskets of white daisies with candelabra holding tall white cathedral candles. White candles and large white satin bows with pastel centers marked the bridal aisle.

Pre-nuptial music was provided by Mrs. J. E. Childress. Mrs. John Burke Marshall of Ste. Genevieve, aunt of the bride, sang, "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer", accompanied by Mrs. Childress.

The bride was escorted down the white- carpeted aisle by her father. She chose a formal gown of white satapeau and silk floss lace trim. A large lace motif centered with a ribbon bow accented the front bodice. A band of lace, traced with a self- fabric ruffle,, encircled the high neckline and wrists of the long fitted sleeves.

Lace motifs also adorned the lower portion of the A-line silhouette skirt and the center of the attached chapel length train. Matching lace encircled the waistline and bordered the hemline of the gown and train. Traditional bridal buttons were used on the cuffs and back closing of the gown.

Her three- tiered bouffant veil of imported illusion was held secure with a bonnet style cap, overlaid with embroidered lace, interwoven with white satin ribbon, and trimmed with pearls. Satin ribbon bows adorned the cap on each side. She carried a white lace handkerchief and a nosegay of white roses and baby's breath.

Miss Sally Marshall was her sister's maid of honor and bridesmaids were a sister, Miss Ellen Marshall, and Miss Tina Klein and Miss Carla Colwick. They wore identical gowns of aqua featuring an overdress of organza with long fitted sleeves and a slightly gathered skirt. The gowns were trimmed with matching ribbon at the waist, neck and wrists, and a Dior bow centered the waist in the back. The attendants carried nosegays of daisies and baby's breath with pastel streamers, each carrying a nosegay of a different color. They wore matching daisies in their hair.

The groom chose James Robbins of New Madrid as best man. The groomsmen were Franklin Marshall of Blodgett, Jerry Robbins of New Madrid, and Terry Beitel of Rock Springs, Wyoming. Ushers were Jim Marshall, Bob Walker, Ricky Nowell of New Madrid and Gary Beitel of Rock Springs.

Mrs. Beitel, the groom's mother, wore a pink crepe gown with white accessories. Both mothers wore orchid corsages.

A reception followed the ceremony at Sikeston Country Club. Presiding at the guest boook were Miss Sandy Swecker of Collinsville, Ill., and Miss Robin Hulsey of Creve Coeur. Organ selections were provided by Joel Allen. Serving the guests were Miss Julie Harbin, Miss Beverly Barnes, Miss Patti Dye, and Miss Ann Marshall. Miss Florence Marshall distributed rice bags to the guests.

The couple left for a brief wedding trip and now lives in Fulton.

A rehearsal dinner was given at Ramada Inn on Friday evening, hosted by the brides aunts and uncles, Mr. and Mrs. Tom A. Marshall of Sikeston and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Marshall of Ste. Genevieve.

A surprise kitchen shower was given by Miss Julie Harbin and Miss Tina Klein at the Harbin Home May 29.

A miscellaneous shower was given June 4 at the Blodgett Community Center by Mrs. Claude Deason, Mrs. Tommy Evans, Mrs. Billy Martin, Mrs. Jim Johnson, Mrs. Larry Cooper, Mrs. Bill Dodson and Mrs. Charles Stubbs.

Mrs. Harold Cope and Mrs. Robert Graham were hostesses at a bridal shower at the home of Mrs. Cope June 9.

On June 13, Mrs. William Northington, Mrs. E. L. Tongate and daughter Dee Ann Tongate entertained with a luncheon at Ramada Inn for the bride's attendants and mothers and relatives of the bride.

Mrs. George Doyle was hostess at a luncheon at her home June 14 honoring the bride.

Miss Courtney becomes first girl cadet

JEFFERSON CITY' Mo. (AP) — Sherry Ann Courtney, 16, a 5- foot- 2 brunette from Florissant, finished a one- week American Legion course Friday at the Missouri Highway Patrol Academy.

Miss Courtney, the first girl to go through the program since it was started three years ago, joined 78 boys of high school age in calistenics and target shooting.

The course is patterned after the six-month highway patrol training academy course.

"We don't expect all of these kids to be highway patrolmen," said Ed Johnson, state adjutant for the American Legion. "We hope that they can go back to their schools and help interpret the role of law enforcement personnel."

The youngsters are nominated for the program by the 17 American Legion districts in the state. The membership for the course is restricted to 80 youngsters.

The course was designed mainly for boys and there was some reluctance toward accepting Miss Courtney, Johnson said.

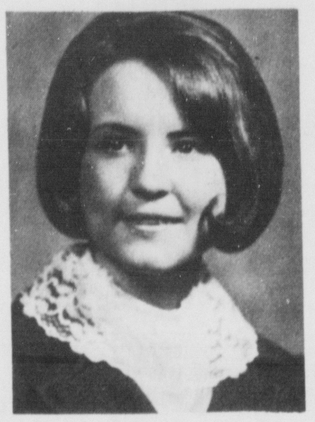
The youngsters are housed for one week at the patrol academy and have to awake at 5:45 a.m. At the end of the course, they get to keep their uniforms.

Miss Courtney "did everything the boys did," Johnson said, including 20 pushups at a time.

An ice- cold watermelon makes a tasty dessert for a back yard supper or barbecue. Cut a narrow lengthwise slice from the melon and scoop out the fruit. Combine the melon with a small can of cling peach slices, a couple sliced bananas and a small can of apricot halves. Drain fruits and return to melon bowl to serve.

A cup each of mayonnaise, whipped cream and crushed fresh strawberries with the juice of a lemon and 1 teaspoon confectioners' sugar is a perfect dressing for a summer salad. It's particularly good on canned cling peach halves, fresh pineapple spears and cantaloupe wedges.

Cathy Tate and R. Barger to wed



Cathey Tate

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Tate of Cash, Ark., announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter Cathy Ann to Michael Roy Barger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Barger of Sikeston.

Miss Tate is a 1973 graduate of West Side High School in Cash and is employed at Mercantile Bank in Jonesboro, Ark.

Barger attended Sikeston public schools until 1968 when he moved to Gonzales, La., where he graduated from East Ascension High School in 1969. He is employed by ADT Security Systems in Jonesboro.

The couple plans an 8 p.m. wedding on July 14 at Earnest Chapel Assembly of God Church in Cash.

Miss Culbertson will wed Tillman

Sharon Culbertson

Mr. and Mrs. Paul D. Culbertson, 1328 McDougal, announce the engagement of their daughter Sharon Kay to Edward Lee Tillman, son of Mrs. Kelly Tolbert, 126 N. Handy.

Tillman is a 1970 graduate of Sikeston High School and has been recently discharged from the Navy.

Miss Culbertson is a junior at Sikeston High School.

Wedding plans are indefinite.

BIRTHS

Today in U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Saturday, June 30, the 181st day of 1973. There are 184 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1950, President Harry S. Truman announced he had ordered U.S. troops stationed in Japan to help the Republic of Korea repel North Korean invaders.

On this date:

In 1777, British forces in the Revolutionary War evacuated New Jersey, crossing to Staten Island, New York.

In 1834, the Indian Territory was created by an Act of Congress.

In 1859, 5,000 persons watched French acrobat Emile Blondin cross Niagara Falls on a tightrope.

In 1934, Adolf Hitler began a purge in Germany, getting rid of hundreds of political and military leaders.

Undersea war we wage

Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. — Airborne electronic "eyes" flashed word here from northwest of Honolulu last April that a near 400- foot-long Russian submarine had surfaced amidst one of the most highly- guarded ocean areas on earth.

Swooping over, Navy tracker planes identified her as a Yankee- class ship carrying 16 ballistic missiles — the equal of our Polaris nuclear subs.

"We were sort of taken aback," says Deputy Commander, Capt. Edward E. Williams of Anti- Submarine Warfare Forces, Pacific. "We knew of a heavy Russian subsea presence in the eastern Pacific. But this was the first confirmation of a 'Y' class big boy so far from home base."

Modified Soviet prowlers of this type are believed capable of lofting nuclear missiles from Hawaii to California, and beyond— some 3,000 miles.

Pressure of an undeclared global undersea war is pushing subs of the USSR Pacific Fleet closer and closer to California waters.

The move is regarded here as critical.

"They're within range of Los Angeles City Hall," say strategists under Vice Admiral Evan P.Aurand, the top submarine boss in these parts. "And close enough to hit Vandenberg Missile Base, ICBM sites at Chico and elsewhere and military bases at San Diego, Riverside and elsewhere."

Aurand and U.S. First Fleet Commander Vice Adm. Raymond E. Peet liken it to "having a many chambered gun pointed at your head in your own back yard."

Invasion of sea space which the Navy cannot affort to yield is a relatively new move by the Soviets.

And it's been a quiet, methodical, growing one.

An unknown number of Russia's estimated 92 nuclear-powered subs of both the cruise- missile and attack type now move in regularly from home bases at Vladivostok and the Kamchatka Peninsula to study eastern Pacific approaches and — reportedly — sow it with factfinding electronic "bugs."

While most attention has been on the Mediterranean, the Atlantic and Cuba, a buildup threatening to West Coast cities and installations has developed."Every inch of California coast, and more, is vulnerable," say Hawaiian experts.

Nowadays the Russians are estimated to have 20 times more undersea boats in their Pacific detachment than Hitler had at the outset of World War II.

Word at Ford Island is that one USSR submarine yard, alone — Severodvinsk on the White Sea — has a greater building capacity than all U.S. sub yards combined.

"Kremlin cigars" are a big part of the fastest naval boom in history. Last January, President Nixon advised the Defense Department to prepare a $15 billion sub and anti- sub system as a key deterrent against nuclear attack through the 1980s. The total USSR submarine strength is 355, compared to 142 for the United States.

Outmatched in numbers, we also lack guided (cruise) missile submarines, of which Russia has a reported 65. These vessels can stand off 300 to 400 miles and hit surface ships beyond their range of retaliation.

Big, $1- billion- each carriers such as the Eisenhower, Nimitz and Kennedy continue to roll down our shipways, but the sub program lags.

This discomfits commanders here and adds to the difficulty of their job — that of setting up defenses.

Visitors here quickly learn now intently the threat to the Pacific Coast is being met.

More than 12,000 men and the most advanced of electronic inventions are employed between the First Fleet out of San Diego, Long Beach and Hawaii and the Seventh Fleet, based at Yokosuka, Japan. Hawaii is a strategic point as the Russians show more and more curiosity about our off- continental defenses.

The first thing one notices at Pearl Harbor is a captured, two- man Japanese sub — a "human torpedo" — which was used to attack Pearl in the raid of December 1941. The attacking force sneaked at least a dozen of these into the harbor as a prelude to the aerial bombardment.

The displayed, 54- foot-long object is there as a reminder that in any future, electonized war, submarines will play the vital role.

Basic to everything going on today in the Pacific is antisubmarine warfare (ASW) — the core of which is the ability to peer into the practically opaque, sound-crammed ocean and detect the presence of an invading ship. "Detection is everything," points out Adm. Aurand. "You may produce the best ASW weapon in the world, but until we find the enemy sub it's useless."

When our undersea patrols leave here or San Diego, they carry a fantastic device called the magnetic anomaly detector. This device spies out obstructions or anomalies in the earth's magnetic field precisely enough to say whether it's a whale, a mass of plankton — or a nuclear or conventional submarine. "It can even tell us by comparing a signal against a known sub's magnetic profile what class of sub it is," says the ASW command. "It can go further — predict the next contact of the ship, its course and speed."

The U.S. now is fitting the advanced, 3,000- mile- range Poseidon nuclear missile into 31 of our 41 ballistic subs. Protecting the West Coast from Mexico to Canada are 23 "Flotilla One" subs — 10 of them nuke- powered attack vessels. They can stay underwater indefinitely, using rotating "Blue" and "Gold" crews. Their target accuracy is 99 percent.

Included in off- California service is the $85 million USS Dolphin, the world's deepest-diving sub and unique in the Navy. Last Jan. 8 the keel was laid for the USS Los Angeles, which is designed to be the quietest- running nuke sub the world has known. She'll be in duty by early 1973.

"Poseidon missiles will be our important new deterrent weapon," explains Capt. Ed Williams. "They'll be outfitted with multiple warheads, each of which can be separately targeted." This is the "ultimate weapon" — MIRV (multiple Independently Targetable Reentry Vehicles). Once fired, MIRV splits off into a number of missiles — each with an objective and flying too fast to be shot down."

"Assuming the Russians have MIRV capability, too," ASW chiefs remind you, "it's our job to be able to destroy any undersea attack before it can be triggered."

Unspoken but a terrible fact is that a multi- megaton missile launched underwater from a submarine is next to impossible to stop. Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles must travel many miles. From a sub, it's only a pop- shot to land.

Only five months ago, a Soviet convoy of seven warships insolently steamed into off- limits Hawaiian waters, passing between Maui and the Big Island of Hawaii. Included were two subs of the attack type. In refueling 20 miles off Diamond Head, the prowlers discharged oil into the sea.

"We had a big hue and cry about pollution," says Adm. Peet's office. "As far as we were concerned, this wasn't the point. The point was that subs, destroyers and supply ships of their Navy could function this far from base and even loiter for several days on the local scene. They showed us great range."

How effective is our detection? "We knew all about them five weeks before they got here," goes on the report. "We'd tracked them closely from off the Siberian coast and never lost contact."

On the other hand, the admirals claim that Soviet antisubmarine forces have never yet detected an American missile sub on patrol.

Operating from California bases and Hawaii is another system of locating invaders far from the West Coast. Soviet subs enter the Pacific from the Indian Ocean through the Strait of Malacca between the Malay Peninsula and Sumatra and through the Japanese Strait between Korea and Japan. These are the subhunter tracker- killer aircraft, chiefly the Grumman S-2 Tracker and the Lockheed P3-C Orion.

"For example, let's say that in wartime an enemy sub is operating in the upper eastern Pacific," says Capt. Williams "How do we pin him down and wipe him out?"

The current answer is a combination of speedy little S-2's equipped with sonobuoy launchers and a flying data-processor plane which carries more electronic gear than any aircraft in the world. These, along with helicopters.

Initially, the trackers send sound buoys plunging deep into the sea, weaving a wide pattern from which a sub, no matter how evasive, cannot escape. Computers absorb the findings of the sonobuoys, indicating the point of attack.

Next comes either the 400-knot PC-3, equipped with another 52 launchers for sonobuoys, a MAD (magnetic anomaly detetor), system digital target computers and a variety of weapons — air- to-surface missiles, depth bombs, torpedoes, rockets and mines.

"The PC-3 is the most highly computerized submarine killer in the air today," states Adm. Bernard Cleary, commander- in- chief Pacific Fleet. Her internal systems can handle four million bits of data per minute.

Prayer for today

from the Upper Room

Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. [Mark 8:34]

PRAYER: Lord, we thank Thee for the cross of Christ that made our salvation possible. As we accept redemption through Him, help us to accept whatever cross we must bear as the cost of our discipleship. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB
Calories Remain, Though

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — In your column about breakfast you stated, "I would recommend pancakes (which can be made without eggs or added fat)." My daughter has a gall bladder condition which prohibits yolks of eggs and all animal and vegetable fats and she likes pancakes so I would appreciate it if you would send me the recipe for pancakes without eggs or fats.

My daughter has a defective thyroid and is considerably overweight, so the internist who examined her prescribed medication and a diet.

Dear Reader — You can use most commercial pancake mixes or almost any standard recipe, just disregard the directions to add an egg or to add shortening or oil. They will turn out fine.

The next question then is what to put on the pancakes. If you are trying to avoid fat intake you can use non-fat dry milk powder. Mix it extra rich until it's thick enough to pass for cream. To this you can add sugar to taste and cinnamon if you like, for a spread on top of the pancakes. This way you can serve pancakes which contain almost no fat. This does not mean that they won't have calories. If your daughter needs to lose weight, pancakes of any type may not be the best idea.

Dear Dr. Lamb — In one of your columns you commented "low blood sugar and many other problems— are often related to living habits, particularly diet, and can frequently be corrected." This seems to imply that hypoglycemia is reversible. I was under the impression that it was the reverse of diabetes, and not correctable or reversible.

Can you give me some suggestions on correct living habits and diet to correct low blood sugar condition?

Dear Reader — The common low blood sugar problems are reversible. They are not at all the opposite of diabetes. The only analogy you can draw here is that in low blood sugar there is a low blood glucose level, whereas in untreated diabetes the blood glucose level is high. The mechanisms involved are quite different.

There are many causes for low blood sugar, including a tumor of the pancreas, involving the tissues that produce insulin. This rare form of low blood sugar might really be considered as the opposite of diabetes. It can be cured by removing the tumor. Most people who have low blood sugar do not have a tumor of the pancreas but have a functional problem related to eating too many sweets.

The most satisfactory diet approach is to eliminate sweets, desserts, starches and shift the emphasis to fresh vegetables, foods with bulk and foods rich in protein. The latter category obviously includes the meats, fish and poultry. Drinks such as hot coffee containing sugar, or sweetened soft drinks are a real no-no. So are sweet starchy foods. For breakfast these individuals should eat fish, such as salmon patties, or broiled or fried fish or meat. With a hot breakfast cereal like hot oatmeal one can use margarine or butter without adding any sweetening. If cereals are used, some individuals may do all right using a small amount of artificial sweetener. But the main emphasis should be on bulk foods relatively low in sweets and a bigger emphasis on protein-type foods.

State board approves vocational programs

Programs designed to provide more young Missourians with career-vocational training and to give "migrant" children a better education were approved by the State Board of Education at its June meeting.

The board of education also approved a program designed to help school districts develop innovative solutions to their local educational problems; a program to continue the federal driver and safety education programs on a statewide basis; and a new contract with the Veterans Administration to provide educational services to Missouri veterans.

All of these projects are for continuation during the coming school year.

It's expected that the career- vocational programs will continue to attract the interest of more and more young people. During the coming year, It's estimated that 178,000 Missourians will enroll in vocational programs, an increase of about 7,500 from this year. Approximately 66 per cent of these will be high school age.

The state vocational plan also calls for the construction or expansion of four area vocational schools.

Construction of new area schools will begin this year at Boonville and Mountain Grove. Schools at Raytown and for the Special School District of St. Louis County will be expanded. Hopefully, most of this construction will be completed by the Fall of 1974.

The program for migratory children is designed to accommodate about 3,500 youngsters, most of whom are the children of migratory agricultural workers. In Missouri, about 90 per cent of these children are located in the Bootheel area.

The migratory project, estimated to cost about $427,000, is a special federally-funded program under Title I, ESEA. In approving the program, the State Board of Education also approved the application for this federal money.

Missouri's plan for migratory children is operated primarily under the auspices of the Educational Service and Record Center at Southeast Missouri State University, Cape Girardeau.

The Center not only provides funds for the local school districts which educate the children, but also provides special assistances with teachers, social workers and with special educational materials and equipment.

Forty- eight school districts will receive direct financial assistance under the Title III, ESEA program to develop innovative and exemplary solutions to their educational problems.

Under this plan, the districts submit educational projects to the State Department of Education for evaluation and approval on an open competition basis. Last year, 31 programs were funded. It's expected that the Title III, ESEA program will cost about $2,400,000 during the coming year.

The driver and safety education program is conducted in cooperation with the Missouri Division of Highway Safety. Federally funded, the program is expected to cost about $300,000. This coming year's program includes seven major tasks, including teacher training and in- service programs, curriculum development, school bus driver training and the purchase of simulation equipment.

What's the law?

By jack Strauss, LL.B.

When it came to money, Helen was as careful as a ticklish girl at a stag party. Consequently, when she made a large deposit at a bank, whe kept one steady eye on the teller and the other on her moola. What she failed to see, however, was a blind man who got in line behind her. Nor did she observe his seeing-eye dog reposing gently at his side.

The result? When Helen turned to walk away from the teller's cage, she tripped on the dog's leash and landed on the floor of the bank next to the somewhat puzzled canine.

Suffering a broken arm in the mishap, Helen was bent on suing the bank for damages.

"Having admitted a seeing-eye dog onto its premises," complained Helen in court, "the bank had a duty to make sure no one fell over its leash. After all, the blind man was in no position to warn anyone of the danger and the dog, obviously, didn't give a '"Woof Woof."'

"Nonsense," responded a bank official. "If anyone was at fault, it was Helen herself. After all, the dog didn't trip over her; she tripped over the dog. Instead of watching her money so intently, she should have been watching her step."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the bank pay its hapless depositor for her injury?

Thsi is how the judge rules: NO! The judge held that responsibility for negligence is based upon a risk that is foreseeable and which can be anticipated. Every possible accident due to and unusual and an unforeseeable combination of circumstances is not included. Reasonable foresight is required, not prophetic visiton.

In this case, concluded the judge, it was not foreseeable that a woman would trip over the leash of a seeing-eye dog lying quietly next to his owner.

Tribute to Photographer Edward Steichen on "Camera Three" July 1

A tribute to one of the world's great photographers is presented in "A Remembrance of Edward Steichen" on "Camera Three" Sunday, July 1 10:00 - 10:30 AM,) on the CBS Television Network. Steichen died this year at 93, a master of fashion, still-life, portrait, commercial and war photography, with various outstanding achievements behind him that he modestly termed "apprenticeships."

This film portrait, made when Steichen was 86, captures the photographer in remembrances of his life and artistic loves. At one time the foremost fashion photographer in New York, Steichen turned to portrait, commercial and still-life photography, excelling at all.

"The photographer establishes an intimate relationship between himself and what he is photographing, whether it's a can of beans or Greta Garbo," he once said.

He saw action in both world wars, with his major focus , as always, on nature and man. "Concentrate on the faces," he told his assistants. "The sips and planes will become obsolete, but not the faces."

The definitive statement of Steichen's artistic philosophy was "The Family of Man," a huge photographic exhibit he collected from around the world for the Museum of Modern Art --completed when he was 76.

This film was written by Jane Kramer and narrated by David Wayne. Merrill Brockway is the executive producer of "Camera Three" for WCBS-TV, CBS Owned station in New York.
